MAN FOUND SLAIN IN REVERE CLUBROOM

Dominick Martelli, 20-year-old Lynn barber, was found dead with three bullet wounds in his body in the rooms of the Elmwood Social Club, Revere, this afternoon. Chief of Police John Dyer of Revere says the man was murdered. The body was discovered by Joseph Carlo, manager of the club. It was lying near the piano in the club's assembly room with the feet resting partially on the pedals of the instrument. It was at first believed that Martelli died from natural causes, it being reported to the police that he had suffered from heart trouble. Later, after Medical Examiner George B. Magrath had examined the body, the police said it was undoubtedly a murder.

Hilda Starts Running Rum to Save Husband From Business Ruin

Vanted to Help When Financial Losses in Lumber Business Threatened Their Happiness, "Duchess of Alcohol" Says in Life Story

By HILDA STONE
"Duchess of Alcohol"

(Dictated in Washington County Jail to Bert Ford, author of "The Fighting Yankees Overseas," and staff correspondent of the Boston Evening American.)

CHAPTER I.

Montpelier, Vt., Feb. 1.—If anyone told me six months before I made up my mind to become a bootlegger that I would be abroad at all hours of the day and night, in all sorts of weather, rubbing elbows with outlaws and myself an outlaw, dodging armed patrols on lonely highways, I would have laughed at him.

Often I wonder, alone here in this little room which is my cell, how I ever mustered up the courage. I pinch myself at times to make sure it's Hilda Stone and that I am awake and my surroundings real.

Hilda Stone a rum-runner and a Federal prisoner, "Duchess of Alcohol" they called me.

That thought burns into my brain.

But I'm not irritable about it. I'm reconciled to the fact that I'm paying the penalty—the inevitable penalty.

Though strangers may not believe it, my life and my instincts were above this. However, adversity changes one's perspective. Not that my husband, Frank H. Stone of West Halifax, and I were in want, but we saw the lumber business that we had built up together by toil and worry and incessant planning slowly crumbling and things going from bad to worse and no prospect of relief.

Clouds hung heavy. The days were dark. He didn't have to tell me how matters stood. I knew before he did, because I kept the books and he had a chance to forget with his duties at the mill.

Husband Amazed

I wanted so to help, but I didn't know what to do. I racked my brain and groped blindly for a solution. Then from something I overheard, I got the notion to be a bootlegger. It was days before I confided my strange idea to my husband. When I did he was too surprised for speech.

I can see his expression still. It was one of mingled tenderness and amazement. Frank was always more patient and optimistic than I, and wiser, too, as developments proved.

"My wife a bootlegger!" he exclaimed. "Hilda a rum-runner! There was a suspicious tremor in his voice. "You're mad Hilda, or only joking. Tell me you're only joking!" "Don't do this Hilda. We can find some other way out of our difficulties," he pleaded.

"But I'm not Frank," I replied "I'm terribly in earnest. Never more earnest in my life. There's no use trying to argue. I've thought about it day and night for weeks before I had the courage to tell you.

"But you can't," he said and he almost squeezed the breath out of me he embraced me so hard. "I say you can't. I won't permit it. Think of the dangers. Think of the riff-raff you'd have to mix with. Think of the disgrace. What would your mother say?"

There was further discussion but he soon saw that I was obdurate. My decision bothered him. I could see it only too plainly. He would keep on reading and arguing and I

A wireless to the Department of Marine and Fisheries at Halifax from the steamer Nausica reported a call for assistance from the Johanne Dybwad, a Norwegian freighter, bound from Barry, England, for Boston. The message said the Dybwald was "badly smashed" and in need of help."

The steamer West Inskip was reported hastening to the aid of the vessel.

$50,000 IN STAMPS, THOUSANDS IN CASH TAKEN BY MASKED MEN

Pawtucket, R. I., Feb. 1.—Using dynamite to terrify two helplessly bound employes of the local postoffice, four armed and masked thugs today cut the doors of three safes and escaped with $50,000 in stamps and thousands more in cash and registered mail matter.

Working leisurely, the thugs cleaned out the safes, placed the contents in empty mail bags, and whirled into the darkness in an automobile.

After hours of effort, Peter F. Rafferty, watchman in the post office, managed to drag himself to the nearby police station, where his bonds and gag were removed.

His companion in misfortune, George D. Sullivan, a clerk, was then released by the police, who started a search for the holdup men.

A checkup today revealed that the thugs took the entire stock of stamps in the postoffice.

The authorities found three tanks of acetylene gas, a torch, a sawed-off sledge hammer, three dynamite fuses, an empty revolver holster, two large calibre cartridges and several small tools.

The police broadcasted an incomplete description of the four men, which corresponded to some extent with that of a party who obtained gasoline at Arnold's Garage, near the Pawtucket post-office. John Hutton, who served the men, said they rode in a Paige sedan of Rhode Island registration.

Rafferty and Sullivan told the police that after being bound and gagged by the thugs, one of the four marauders produced several sticks of dynamite which he placed on the floor before the victims.

Throughout the time the others were cutting through the safe doors with acetylene torches, the guard

MRS. SHALIT IS GIVEN $7,000 IN BALM CASE

Mrs. Alice White Shalit, pretty Brookline matron, who brought a $250,000 heart balm suit against her mother-in-law, Mrs. Annie R. Shalit, of Portland, Me., was today awarded a verdict of $7,000.

The award was contained in a sealed verdict handed in by a jury in the Supreme Court in this city, where for two weeks the alienation of affections case has been on trial.

Judge Joseph E. F. Connolly, counsel for the elder Mrs. Shalit, one of the wealthiest women in Maine, announced that he would appeal the verdict.

The victor in one of the most sensational heart balm suits in the history of the Maine courts was overjoyed but not surprised when informed of the jury's action.

Mrs. Alice Shalit, wife of Dr. Harold Shalit, had returned to Brookline with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Barnett White, immediately after the case was concluded.

"I knew it," she told the Boston Evening American. "I knew I would win. All last Summer and Fall when my friends told me my chances of winning were small, I said that once the jury heard my story they had to believe me.

over the two helpless employes kept them in constant fear by threatening to light fuses attached to the dynamite.

WORKED FOR 3½ HOURS.

According to the police the robbery was the most deliberate and efficient ever perpetrated in any postoffice in the State, and was undoubtedly carried out by professionals.

The thugs were in the postoffice approximately three and a half hours, and made a careful selection of what valuables they found.

The four men were masked with white handkerchiefs which bore large blue polka dots, apparently new.

As Rafferty, the watchman, was locking up the place for the night, the four men stepped from a big limousine. As he reached up to place the storm covers over a window he felt two gun barrels stuck into his ribs.

CLERK SUBDUED.

"Walk in," commanded one of the bandits, a man who stood well over six feet.

As Rafferty walked in in front of the levelled revolvers, Sullivan rushed out from behind the counter. He was carrying a revolver. It was soon knocked from his hand. He was covered by two automatic pistols in the hands of two of the other yeggs.

It took but a few moments for the four men to truss the two employes up and bind them to chairs.

Calmly one of the men took six sticks of dynamite out of his overcoat pocket. He placed three sticks in front of each man. Then he attached a fuse.

"If you move or yell or make any disturbance, I'll light this fuse," he threatened.

As the three masked men worked on the safe locks and doors, the one who was left to guard the trussed-up men, stood calmly in front of them with a box of matches and threatened them for an hour. Every once in a while he would light a match and place the flame near the fuses.

FILLED MAIL SACKS.

The employes watched the three men work until they saw great, gaping holes cut into the safe doors.

Then, still leaving the one man to guard their prisoners, the three men went to the rear of the postoffice, secured five mail sacks, emptied them of their content and filled them with the loot taken from the safes.

Calmly they carried the five bags to the automobile which had been parked in an alleyway near the postoffice.

Just before they left the man who had been on guard over the men tighted another match and threatened to light the fuses that would send the two men to a certain doom.

"Hell!" said one of the polka-dotted thugs, "let 'em go. We got ours."

For more than an hour both struggled to free themselves of their bonds. Finally Rafferty fell off the chair upon which he had been tied.

This was the start of his escape. Slowly he edged his way, carrying the chair with him. Inch by inch he edged toward the door, left open by the fleeing thugs.

Inch by inch he made his way toward the police station, but a few yards away. Snail-like he made his way. He could shout no alarm because of the gag.

KNOCK AT DOOR WITH HEAD.

When he reached the doorway of the stationhouse he could not, because his hands were still bound, knock on the door. He managed to crawl up the stone steps of the stationhouse and butted the door with his head.

The men were described to the police and postoffice inspectors as one, tall, well over six feet and weighing about 240 pounds; another about five feet nine inches tall and weighing about 200 pounds; the third as being about five feet nine inches tall and weighing about 150 pounds, and the fourth as being about five feet seven inches tall and weighing about 130.

All were dressed in dark suits, wore gray coats and light caps, and all were masked with the same polka dot handkerchiefs.

minals, and many are stalled in different parts of New England.

94-MILE GALE RAGES.

On the wings of a gale attaining nearly 50 miles an hour at times, the forces of storm scooped down in a fury of snow and hail.

Automobilists were compelled to grope their way through the city streets, trolleys crept along their rights of way, even the Elevated found the snow barring passage on the structures.

In the first hours the storm numbered four victims in Boston, either victims of cold and exposure, or injured in accidents resulting from the blinding sheets of snow.

William Donahue of No. 46 Wadsworth street, South Boston, is in the City Hospital suffering from exhaustion. He collapsed at Oak and Hudson streets, and was removed to the Boston City Hospital in the ambulance.

Mrs. Annie Day, 35 years old, of No. 11 Bartlett street, Charlestown, had a narrow escape from death in the waters of the Charles River when the taxicab in which she was riding and which was being operated by Nicholas McGeney, skidded on the wood planks of the Warren avenue draw bridge and crashed against the draw.

She is at the Haymarket Relief Hospital suffering from cuts and bruises.

INJURED IN CRASH.

John F. Costa of No. 93 Burrell street, Swampscott, is at the Boston City Hospital suffering from injuries received when he was thrown from his automobile when it collided with another machine operated by Frank L. Daniels of No. 79 Beechhill street, Quincy. The accident occurred on Beacon street, near Herreford street.

Abraham Smith, 50 years old, of No. 14 Edenon street, Chelsea, is at Haymarket Relief Hospital suffering from injuries about the knees. He was jammed between his truck and another in the market district. He was riding on the running board when the automobile skidded into the side of another truck, pinning him between the two machines.

The storm was the worst of the Winter to date. Starting with a heavy sleet fall the storm continued through the night, resulting in the freezing of telegraph and telephone wires, signal towers and switches along the three main railroads running into Boston.

The weather forecaster made the prediction that the storm would continue through the night n any event, and perhaps tomorrow, so that New England may awake to find itself snow-bound.

WIRES DOWN ON CAPE.

The New Haven road reported that therew as no service today from Harrison square to the tip of Cade Cod that telegraph wires were down all through the Cape district.

The Boston & Maine Railroad reported trouble with frozen switches and towermen were unable to see through the blinding snow. The road reported no trains running on the White River Junction section and great delay around Lowell.

In some cides it was necessary to close the schools. In the western part of the State both the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Company reported trouble.

Extra men have already been called into work by the Elevated and steam railroads to watch switches and lights in signal towers which have been covered by the wet snow making it impossible for engineers to run through the yards in safety.

Local railroad traffic was seriously impaired during the late afternoon hours because of snow-covered signals and clogged switches. Many of the trains at the South Station were from ten to twenty minutes late in starting their journies to suburban points. This was also true of local trains running to points out of Boston from the North Station.

house in which the bodies were discovered were revived.

Medical Examiner David Dow declined to issue any statement other than: "I have not made up my mind yet." He did announce he would perform an autopsy on the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. William Holland today.

George Dwelly of Wrentham street, Dorchester, son of Daniel Dwelly and brother of Mrs. Daniel Holland, discovered the tragedy when he entered.

Laughing voices, heard by neighbors at 10 Saturday night, were stilled some time later, presumably by gas fumes. Electric lights in the house burned all night.

It was only Saturday afternoon that Mr. and Mrs. William Holland moved in to No. 468. Some hours later their new home was a house of death.

Mr. Dwelly, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Holland and the two children went there late Saturday afternoon to help their relatives put the piano into place.

Situated just across the street from the Congregational Church, the discovery of the bodies attracted the attention of hundreds, and the house of death soon became the center of a milling mob, fortunately kept outside the white picket fence by the police.

George O'Neil, now living at No. 33 Loring street, Waverley, said he had lived in the back ell of the white house, owned by Clarence Richardson, until about Christmas time, when he moved.

"I stayed there just six weeks," said Mr. O'Neil. "Then we decided to move. I knew there was gas escaping, and one night my mother was overcome, and collapsed. She also had severe headaches while we were there."

DREAMED GIRL MET DEATH IN JUDGE'S CAR

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 1.—Dr. H. N. Kingsford, State pathologist, completed an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Mildred Presley of Lebanon, who met her death under mysterious circumstances while a passenger in the car of Judge Fred A. Jones of Lebanon, and his report is today in the hands of County Solicitor Clark B. Frost at Lisbon.

Judge Jones is charged with first degree manslaughter. He is facing arraignment before Judge H. E. Burton, Justice of the Hanover District Court, when he sufficiently recovers from injuries received when his car crashed through a fence and into a creek off the Hanover-Lebanon road.

The funeral of Mrs. Presley was held today from the home of her mother, Mrs. Ethel Johnson, of Lebanon. The Rev. H. H. White of the Baptist Church will conduct the services.

Mrs. Johnson said she saw a vision of her daughter at the moment she met her death.

"I dreamed I saw Mildred running towards me, her arms were outstretched for me to catch her, just as she did when she was a little girl. I heard her cry, 'Mama, Mama, Mama.' I reached out to catch her and she went out of sight I awoke startled and I cried out 'Mildred is dead.' I was sure of it something told me it was so. I looked at her bed and it was empty.

"My dream came to me at two o'clock in the morning, the accident happened at that hour, she had called for me a moment before she died."

PONZI PLEA FOR SYMPATHY IS NIPPED

Charles Ponzi's newest scheme to arouse sympathy for himself in Massachusetts was nipped in the bud by directors of the Southern Florida Fair at Tampa, Florida.

The dapper "ex-wizard" had planned to have a huge petition in his booth setting forth the statement that he had been sufficiently punished and that the state of Massachusetts would be persecuting him to punish him further. He intended to ask all visitors to sign this petition and then send the document to Boston.

But when Ponzi went to take over his booth today he found on inquiry of Manager H. T. Strelder that "all available floor space had been taken."

REVERE ANNEX HEARING ENDS IN ROW

A near-fist fight, during which angry words and threats were bandied about, raged for half an hour today at the State House between prononents and adversaries of the proposed bill to annex Revere to Boston. After a vain attempt to quell the noisy partisans, State House guards turned them into the street.

The uproar followed the continued hearing before the Legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs on the bill of Michael F. Shaw providing for the annexation.

High tension between the two factions was felt during the hearing. It reached the breaking point when Louis Glikman of Revere shouted at Leonard Berkowitz, "You're an annexationist because you're sore you weren't appointed assistant city solicitor."

Berkowitz denied the charge and a babel of mutterings, charges and counter-charges followed.

WOMEN IN ROW.

Women with children in their arms joined in the dispute. Proponents of the bill were in the majority. The crowd numbered about 150.

Charges of political bias and influence filled the air as the throng moved out of the State House.

The Rev. George Anaworth, Revere clergyman, evoked prolonged applause when he concluded a speech for annexation with a plea for a popular referendum in Revere. He said that he had great respect for the present administration and he felt that it was doing the best it could in a bad situation, but he believed that Revere should be annexed to Boston.

Former State Senator Andrew Cassesa expressed opposition to the annexation plan.

NICHOLS OPPOSES.

He said he believed that Revere could take care of itself and a change for the better was already indicated by the promise of a reduced tax rate.

Theodore N. Waddell, State director of the division of accounts, was called by opponents of annexation to give a report on Revere's finances. He said that a year ago the situation was serious, but that the present administration, with the help of the people, could reduce the tax rate to a figure below $40. He said his department found a deficit of $225,000 when they examined the finances of Revere.

Both Mayor Nichols of Boston and Mayor John Walsh of Revere sent spokesmen to the hearing to express their opposition to the move.

Mayor Nichols was represented by Corporation Counsel Deland and Mayor Walsh by City Solicitor Di Pesa.

Mr. Deland said that Mayor Nichols believes that the time for such a project is not ripe.

Denying that Mayor Walsh's opposition was due to the fact that the bill would legislate him out of office, City Solicitor Di Pesa said that Revere's executive feels that the vast majority of the people of that city do not want annexation to Boston. He predicted that careful management of finances would cut $10 from the present high tax rate of $44.80.

Woman's Story Backs Claim of Hummel Heir

HUB TWIN FOR STAR

RECALLS SEEING ABE WITH SON

Flood of Messages Aid Portland Bakery Man in Fight for Lawyer's Fortune

Portland, Me., Feb. 1.—In a veritable deluge of letters, telegrams and toll telephone calls, evidence was tossed today into the lap of Henry Hummel, bread man of Portland, that he is the son of the late Abe Hummel, old-time lawyer extraordinary.

Henry claims to be Abe's son, thus refuting claims by heirs of the lawyer that he never had a son and that Henry, therefore, is an imposter.

From Mrs. Catherine Borrine of No. 51 Ogden avenue, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., one of hundreds who have communicated with Portland after reading the strange story in Hearst newspapers throughout the country, came one letter today.

In the letter was a story that made Henry, the bread man, scurry right home, rummage through his musty trunks, and race back to the office of his counsel, bearing a tiny full-dress suit that would fit a boy five or six years of age.

In her letter Mrs. Borrine declared that she was a daughter of Fred Frye, personal tailor for Abe Hummel in New York, and remembered many visits of the lawyer to her father's shop.

One one occasion, she said, Hummel entered with his wife, Lelia Farrell, vaudeville artist, and their boy, four or five years old, for whom they ordered a tiny full dress suit made.

During the visit, she said, Abe placed the boy on a table and said:

"Show everybody, Henry, how you would address the jury if you were trying a case."

The boy stood on a shaky table and lisped out a perfect imitation of Abe Hummel's intonations of speech and gestured in comical fashion, just as the lawyer gestured when talking seriously.

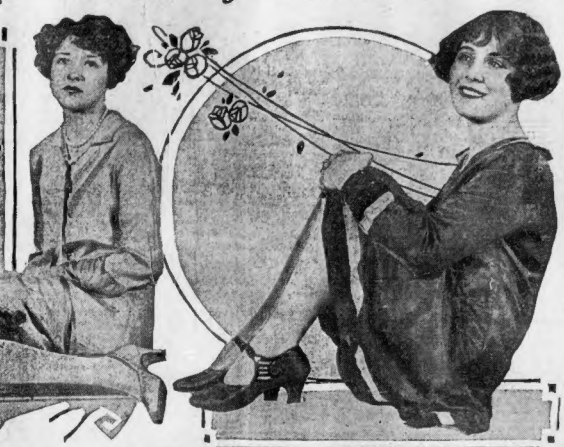
MISS ETHEL LA PIERRE, BOSTON'S "SALLY"
Two striking likenesses of the happy South End girl who resembles Sally O'Neill, star of "Mike," so much that she was the unanimous choice of the judges. Her home is at No. 60 West Newton street.



MISS LUCY MARSTON FINISHES SECOND
One of Everett's entrants was runner-up and she receives $25 in gold. Lucy was one of seven selected for the "finals" out of the hundreds who sent in photos. Her home is at No. 213 Belmont street.

MISS RUTH RIDEOUT
This Somerville girl student finished third. She lives at No. 80 Hudson street.

OFFICIAL FOUND GUILTY OF 'GRAFT'

James H. Crowley, former chairman of the Hollaston Board of Health, was found guilty today by a jury in Middlesex Superior Criminal Court, of larceny from Joseph Katzeff, proprietor of a slaughter house in Holliston.

Crowley was found not guilty of charge of larceny from Ben Porter, manufacturer of soft drinks, in Holliston.

According to the findings, Crowley forced Katzeff to pay on pain of losing his license.

By agreement of counsel, Asst. Dist. Atty. Robert T. Bushnell for the prosecution, and John E. Swift for the defense, sentence was deferred until February 8, and bail for Crowley was set at $2,000.

STATE RIGHT TO TRY DRY AGENTS IS UPHELD

Washington, Feb. 1 (U.N.S.).—The Supreme Court today in a test case brought by the State of Maryland overruled Judge Soper, who in Federal Court in Baltimore, ordered five prohibition agents charged with the murder of Lawrence Wenger, a Marylander, tried under Federal instead of State laws.

'Sally O'Neill' of Hub Is South End Girl

Meet Boston's "Sally O'Neill," you Boston folks.

She is Miss Ethel LaPierre, just 19 years old—a clinging vine, sweet and simple type of girl—who lives at No. 60 West Newton street, the South End, where she helps mother care for a house full of lodgers.

Out of hundreds who believed they resembled most closely the real Sally O'Neill, star of the comedy film "Mike," which opened at Loew's State Theatre today, Ethel was chosen as the girl whose belief was best founded.

She resembles the real Sally O'Neil as one twin sister resembles the other. And because she has that close resemblance and has been picked as Boston's "Sally O'Neill," the South End girl will receive $50 in gold, a chance to go on the stage in the Loew chain of theatres throughout the country, and an outfit of clothing and things to delight the heart of any girl.

By a process of elimination the hundreds of photographs submitted by girls were brought down to seven and the seven girls were invited to this office personally.

THREE WINNERS.

They were lined up by the judges and closely inspected for resemblance to Sally O'Neill, with the result that three were selected from the seven.

Unanimously the judges voted Ethel as having the greatest resemblance; Lucy Marston, of No. 213 Belmont street, Everett, as the second girl, and Ruth Rideout, 15-year-old North Eastern Junior High School pupil, of No. 80 Hudson street, Somerville, as third.

Lucy, as runner up and Ruth as the third-place winner, came in for prizes of $25 each, and Lucy said that, as one of nine children, she intends to spend her money on the family.

But, of course, Ethel LaPierre was happiest of the three, for through being chosen first, she will receive:

A Sally O'Neill hat creation from Shepard's.

Silk chiffon hosiery from Butler's, Inc., 90 Tremont street.

The latest of fashion's shoes from Arthur Wallace—447-452 Washington street.

A leather suit case from Summerfield's Furniture—728 Washington street.

A Lane red cedar chest from Prime Furniture Co.—715 Washington street.

A northern seal jacquette from Klaff and Mack—8 Winter street.

JUDGE SCOLDS 'DINE AND RUN SISTERS'

Marion and Mildred Drinkwater of Everett were branded as "the dine and run sisters" by Attorney William H. Hennessey, counsel for two young men whom the girls charged with trying to attack them on an automobile ride.

The young men, Frederick Gilchrist of Weld street, West Roxbury, and James Powers of St. Botolph street, Back Bay, were discharged by Judge Brackett.

"What did you expect?" the judge asked the sisters.

"The boys were utter strangers and you knew they had been drinking."

Marion testified she had previously "picked up" Powers with another girl on Huntington avenue. Later he called her by phone, asked her to meet him, and bring another girl for a friend of his. So she took her sister with her. They wanted to dine and dance—which brought forth Attorney Hennessey's classification of them—but the boys insisted on motoring.

Near Dedham, the sisters said, the youths attempted an attack more in what they said than actual violence.

Both girls admitted they had been smoking, but Mildred had been called a "poor sport" by the men because she would not drink. They testified that when they objected to what the men said the door of the speeding car was thrown open and they were told to jump. Finally they testified, they induced the men to slow down the car and allow them to get out.

Again in Toils

Earl Woodward, hunted as a kidnaper through the Vermont hills and later acclaimed a hero when it was shown he had taken a little girl from her home to give her opportunity for an education, went to jail today. He was bound over in $500 bonds, charged with larceny and with breaking and entering.

GIGANTIC WARD FOOD COMBINE IS ATTACKED

Washington, Feb. 1 (A.P.).—President Coolidge and the investigating agencies of his administration were attacked today in the Senate by Senator King, Democrat, Utah, in connection with the formation of a new $500,000,000 corporation by the Ward interests to deal in bread and other foodstuffs.

Declaring this was only one effort at combinations "for the control of necessities," Senator King said attention could be directed "to many conspiracies in restraint of trade which in the end must destroy the economic system."

"I do not expect the Department of Justice to act," he said. "They are sleeping while great trusts are being formed.

"The Federal Trade Commission is impotent. I do not say that a majority is protecting the predatory interests, but a majority takes a view cognizant to the spirit of the Trade Commission Act.

"The administration is wholly indifferent to the growth of monopolies and trusts. Indeed, the President recently in New York seemed to pronounce a benediction on these great organizations."

SOCIETY'S PERFECT COUPLE REWED

Both Admit Ceremony Performed in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York

Society's perfect couple, the former Muriel Vanderbilt and Frederick Cameron Church, Jr., one the perfect girl of her set, the other Harvard's perfect man, have been remarried in the Catholic church.

Announcement of the second marriage was made today by Muriel's mother, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, and was confirmed in the Hub by Muriel herself, although she had denied it previously.

The first marriage, an Episcopal service, was performed at the brilliant society function last July in Newport, when rumors were afloat that a Catholic ceremony had also been contemplated, but that Church had balked at the eleventh hour.

In Mrs. Vanderbilt's announcement today, it was cited that the second and Catholic ceremony was performed quietly in New York some time ago. No definite date was given.

One of the usual requirements of the Catholic Church before a Catholic marriage ceremony may be performed, providing one or both of the contracting parties of different faith, is that an agreement to bring up children in the Catholic faith must be signed.

The couple now live in Chestnut street, below Beacon Hill, and their home overlooks the Charles River.

NO CHANGE OF FAITH.

The Catholic ceremony, according to Muriel to a Boston Evening American reporter today, was performed in New York by the Rev. Thomas Murphy of the Church of the Resurrection. When and where she would not say, but she made it plain that it was not in the church itself.

Muriel demurred at explaining what prompted Church to change his mind and have the second ceremony performed.

"The story of our marriage has been flaunted around the country, some papers carrying a distorted version," she said, in telling why she was admitting it after a previous denial.

"That is why the statement has been issued. I feel now that the facts and about the matter the better. It is an extremely personal affair with us. The ceremony does not affect Mr. Church's religious beliefs and he remains an Episcopalian."

CHURCH RETICENT.

Church himself was reticent and would not say whether he had agreed to rear his children, if any, in the Catholic faith, the point on which he balked at the wedding last July.

"Mrs. Vanderbilt's announcement completely covers the matter," he said. "There is nothing further to say."

One rumor in circulation had it that the second and Catholic ceremony was performed during the confusion centering about the wedding of Muriel's sister, Consuelo, to Earl T. Smith at the home of the bride's mother on Fifth avenue, New York, early in January.

HERE ARE THE EXHIBITS---HUMAN AND OTHERWISE---IN THE ABE HUMMEL ESTATE CASE

The beautiful actress, Lelia Farrell, whose marriage to Abe Hummel, noted New York lawyer, is attested to by Mrs. Emma S. Knight, prominent in Portland, Me., social circles. She received a formal announcement of the event and an "at home" card, she says.

Henry, or "Abie" Hummel, as Portland folk call him for his resemblance to his father, and his faithful horse. Henry is a bakery delivery man, but he will fight for the Hummel estate, he says, to vindicate the memory of his mother and her pure reputation even if he has to steal and borrow the means to fight the case to the highest court in the land.

Will the dead hand of the lawyer, Abe Hummel, who died in exile, acknowledge the legitimacy of the son whose presence he seemed to have resented in life? It is thought there is a big estate and a will, but the extent and contents of these are to be determined.

There are many persons who can remember the time when Abe Hummel, the lawyer, was proud of his wife and his young son and heir; of the money he lavished on them and young Henry well remembers the nurse who used to take him on boat rides when he was a child. These persons will back Henry in his claim for his father's estate. Among the gifts to the wife was a $10,000 set of silverware, Henry says. Mrs. Emma S. Knight, a Portland social leader, remembers receiving an announcement of the Hummel wedding, and later, an "at home" card.

Mrs. C. F. Jellerson, mother of Lelia Farrell, and grandmother of young Henry, or "Abie" Hummel, who will testify as to incidents in the marital career of her son-in-law and daughter, and [illegible] back up the claim of her grandson.

NODDLE ISLAND SKATERS' TURN COMES NEXT

Competition in Gold Skate Racing at World War Park Saturday

With the Charlestown eliminations now a matter of history in the Boston Evening American's Gold and Silver Skate Jubilee Races, the objective of Boston's skaters is now World War Memorial Park in East Boston, where next Saturday's tryouts will be staged.

No winter event could have been more successfully conducted or more thoroughly enjoyed by contestants and the 5,000 spectators than the biz affair at the Sullivan Square playground Saturday.

The races were all hard fought by a large list of entries, the officials, men of long experience in handling affairs of the kind, took care that everything was run off smoothly, and the whole day was a complete success.

ELIGIBLE TO ENTER

And now comes East Boston with its quota of speedsters whom the Noddle Islanders claim to be among the best in the city.

All skaters who live in the East Boston district must compete next Saturday if they wish to have a chance at the gold and silver skates to be awarded to the winners in the finals.

Those skaters who live in the North End or West End of Boston and who did not compete in last Saturday's races at Charlestown may enter the East Boston eliminations.

Remember that the winners of the different classes will not only have the opportunity to compete for the beautiful prize in the finals, but they will also receive, quite apart from the final prize, a pair of silver skates for winning their races in the tryouts.

FILL OUT BLANK

Remember, all you who are eligible for the East Boston races, to get in your entries as soon as possible. You will find an entry blank printed with this article.

All that is necessary is to fill it out and mail it to the Skate Editor, Boston Evening American, No. 5 Winthrop Square.

The best way to reach World War Memorial Park, formerly called Wood Island Park, from the city proper is to take the East Boston tunnel to Maverick Square and there change to the Gladstone street-Orient Heights surface car. Get off at Prescott street and you have but a short walk to the ice.

The classes and the wards for boys under 14: 440 yards for boys under 16; 880 yards for boys under 21; 440 yards for girls under 16; 880 yards for girls over 16.

LIFER ASSAILED BY WOMAN IN COURTHOUSE

Lowell Slayer Attacked as He Is Being Taken Away After Sentence

On his way to jail to serve a life sentence just imposed in Middlesex Superior Court for murder, Robert A. Smith of Lowell was attacked today in a corridor of the courthouse by a woman relative of his victim.

Smith, who pleaded guilty to second degree murder in connection with the killing of John J. Hayes, a Lowell constable, was rescued by court officers, to whom he was shackled.

Leaping at the prisoner's throat, the hysterical woman cried:

"You dirty cur, leaving four fatherless children, you ought to be hung."

Her screams, mingled with the shouts of court officers, attracted a crowd which blocked the corridor and was dispersed with difficulty.

More court officers reached the scene, and the woman, said to have been accompanied by a daughter of Smith's victim, was led away sobbing.

After Smith had pleaded guilty in Court, District Attorney Reading asked, in moving for sentence, that Judge Dubuque accept the plea. The district attorney said that Smith had attempted suicide after shooting Hayes, who had been employed to spy on the other man. He said Smith's employer, Samuel Scott, suspected him of being short in his accounts.

According to the district attorney, Smith and Hayes were involved in a continual argument which culminated with the shooting on October 5. Reading said Smith had an excellent war and civilian record. He is married and has two children.

A special panel of 75 talesmen was drawn for the jury and at the noon recess 10 jurors had been selected. The government had used 10 challenges and the defendant 17.

Bravery and quick-thinking of Patrolman Thomas A. Donovan of Somerville today, saved seven people from death or injury in the fire that swept through the tenement block at Broadway and Autumn street, Somerville.

He saw a wisp of smoke that threatened tragedy seeping through the walls. He turned in an alarm from a nearby box, and then braved the flames in a dash through the house to arouse tenants.

On the second floor he aroused Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Weene and their daughter, Ruth, and then ran to the third floor where he awoke Mr. and Mrs. John Purdy.

By this time the fire apparatus had reached the scene. Then Mrs. Weene discovered that her sons, Joseph, 18, and Henry, 20, were still in their room.

Once more the patrolman made the trip into the blazing house, accompanied by Captain Joseph Ward, acting district chief, and Hoseman Rooney. They aroused the boys and all five groped their way through the smoke filled halls.

NEW HAVEN BOY SMUGGLED TO HUB IN SLEEPER

"I didn't leave no call for 7:30," grumbled nine-year-old Michael Mahan from his comfortable berth in a New Haven to Boston Pullman today. "Let me alone," and the blase traveler turned over.

But it was not a porter who awakened "Mike," but a car cleaner, and the Pullman was in the freight yards at South Boston, the other passengers having long since left the train.

Mike made such a small bundle that the conductor and porter had not seen him.

"I live at No. 63 York street, New Haven," he told a policeman who was summoned, "and I boarded this train with a fellow traveling man who paid my fare. Ain't he here now?"

"Mike's" dad will be called upon to solve the mystery.

3 HARVARD MEN AND 5 GIRLS ARE FREED

Cambridge Judge Says Raided Party Was Only "a Silly Little Dinner"

Described by Judge Arthur P. Stone as just a "silly, boisterous dinner party," the case against three Harvard students and five girls who were arrested by the Cambridge vice squad in a raid on a house in Garden street, Cambridge, Sunday, was dismissed today.

In the private lobby of the Third District Court, where the youths and girls were arraigned, Judge Stone, in a lecture which was open only to newspaper men, stated that he had investigated the case and discovered that all the defendants were respectable and were merely enjoying themselves in a rather boisterous manner.

He said the fact that it was Sunday of course made the case worse, but did not seem to think that it was such a "wild party" as was alleged by the police.

Samuel R. Roberts, 24 years old; Daniel H. Hodgeman, 22 years old, Harvard students who live in the Garden street apartment, and George M. Grant, 24 years old, of Hemenway street, Boston, also a Harvard student, were the men arrested.

The girls were Miss Mary Hennesey, 22 years old, of Francis street, Boston; Miss Gladys Brown, 22 years, of Warren street, Brookline; Miss Jean E. Cronin, 20, of Waverley street, Roxbury, Miss Enid Weatherbee, 24, of Harvard street, Cambridge, and Miss Mary McTigue, 26, of Woodbine street, Roxbury.

Police say the raid was conducted as a result of complaints from residents of the vicinity, but Judge Stone explained this was due to the noise that the gathering was making.

SAMUEL INSULL WILL SPEAK AT HUB CHAMBER

4 RESCUED AT QUINCY FIRE

Four children, ranging down in age from twelve years to two, were carried through the smoke-filled house at No. 31 Wilson street, West Quincy, today in a fire that resulted in a damage of $1,000.

A mattress had caught fire in the downstairs apartment of John Vogel, widower, and Vogel believed he had extinguished it completely.

Early today, however, he was awakened by the crackling of flames and found that the mattress had rekindled.

Rushing upstairs, he aroused Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mullerf, each of whom snatched up two children and groped their way to the street in the storm. The children, Anna, Joseph, James and Catherine, were cared for at the home of a neighbor.

LEWIS STONE AT OLYMPIA

The doubtful burden of an over weight bank roll descends upon the capable shoulders of Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson in their latest film release, "Too Much Money," an adaptation of the play by Israel Zangwill, at the Olympia.

Mr. Stone is again cast as a wealthy and wise husband and Miss Nilsson is the butterfly wife who easily qualifies for championship honors in the free and easy spending class.

But love will find a way—and it does, always. Lew concludes that it isn't the money, it's the principle of the thing; so tossing aside the check book, he tells the wife he's broke and, strange as it may seem, she gladly follows him to the Bronx and the life of the working class. The family capital, however, is later retrieved and all ends happily.

Shorter screen subjects and a bill of vaudeville complete the program.

SEIZED AS WIFE DESERTER

Otis W. Howe, one of the principals in the $2,000,000 soft collar suit against John M. Van Heusen, appeared in Middlesex Court today before Judge George A. Flynn on charges of desertion and non-support brought by his wife, Elizabeth M. Howe.

She charges he deserted her July 14, 1920. He was arrested in Troy, N. Y., as a fugitive from justice.

Today he pleaded not guilty and the case was continued until February 15. He was allowed to go on his own personal recognizance.

'BOBBED HAIR' AT FENWAY

An all star cast makes up the personnel of "Bobbed Hair" at the Fenway, containing such well-known filmsters as Marie Prevost, Kenneth Harlan, Louise Fazenda, John Roche, Emily Fitzroy, Reed Howes and Walter Long.

To bob, or not to bob? That is the question the fair lady must decide, for she has two suitors of opposing views on the perplexing subject. To further complicate the situation, she is forced by the terms of her aunt's will, to be married by her twenty-first birthday—and the time is at hand.

Promising that the momentous decision about her tresses shall mean her choice between them, she prepares to think the matter out to a conclusion, but a handsome stranger happens on the scene who is evidently neutral and otherwise generally agreeable, so she settles the question for better or worse.

WALSH CALLS FOR PROBE OF MELLON FIRM

Demands "Secret" Evidence Be Shown Senate Inquiry Into Aluminum Company

Washington, Feb. 1 (A.P.).—Senate investigation of the Aluminum Company of America, in which Secretary Mellon is a large stockholder, is recommended in a report submitted today to the Judiciary Committee by Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana.

This proposal is made, the Senator says, because of "doubts aroused as to the vigor and good faith of the Department of Justice in the conduct of its inquiry to establish whether the Aluminum Company has violated a Federal Court consent decree entered against it in 1912.

ASKS "SECRET EVIDENCE."

Besides recommending what would be a third government investigation of the Mellon company within four years, Senator Walsh asks that the Senate direct the Federal Trade Commission to turn over to it all of the evidence furnished by the aluminum concern and which the commission withheld from the Justice Department on the ground that it is "confidential."

Describing this action of the commission as "senseless," Senator Walsh takes the position that since the Senate ordered the commission to make the investigation in the first instance it can compel production of the evidence.

SARGENT IS ASSAILED.

Attorney-General Sargent and other officials of the Justice Department are sharply assailed by Senator Walsh for the manner in which the inquiry was prosecuted after the Trade Commission had reported to the department in October, 1924, that the Aluminum Company had violated the consent decree.

Sally O'Neill, Star of "Mike"

NEAREST LIKENESS TO STAR OF "MIKE" AT LOEV
MISS ETHEL LA PIERRE OF

MEET The Sally O'Neill of Boston.

She is Miss Ethel La Pierre of 60 West Newton Street, Boston, a home girl, 19 years of age.

Miss La Pierre is the petit, school-girl type, like the real Sally O'Neill, star of the cinema "Mike", the feature picture at Loew's State, with a wealth of dark hair, eyes that are a harmony of brown, a tiny retrousse nose, well-chisled, dainty chin, lips molded on the Irish order and straight, white teeth.

Her face in repose looks like that of Sally when the "Mike" of screen fame is thinking serious thoughts, her smile is flashing, her laugh is rollicking, she is the essence of sweetness and the almost-perfect replica of "Mike."

The second prize winner in the Sally O'Neill contest is Miss Lucy Maston, 213 Belmont Street, Everett, born in Chelsea and at present employed in Kresge's Tremont Street Department Store.

Third place went to Ruth Rideout, a charming miss of 80 Hudson Street, Somerville, 15 years of age, a high school student.

It was no easy matter, this choosing from the many applicants, Boston's Sally O'Neill.

Miss Iris L. King, 70 Turner Street, Brighton; Miss Hyacinthe Larkin, 19 Pearl Av., Winthrop; Miss Frances Joy[illegible] 120 Glenville Avenue, Allston, Miss Thelma Crowell, 16 Scho[illegible] Street, Lynn, and the ultimate three winners, the Misses Et[illegible] La Pierre, Lucy Maston and Ruth Rideout, all veritable beauti[illegible] all on the pedestal of near-fame and yet WHO was it to be?

Mr. E. A. Kirtley, general manager of the millinery depa[illegible] ment of the Shepard Stores, chairman of the committee [illegible] judges, finally called for a vote with the result that the thr[illegible] finalists were left standing alone for the final tests.

Besides the fifty dollars in gold that goes to the winner [illegible] well as twenty-five dollars in gold each to the winners of seco[illegible] and third places, the merchants of Boston rallied strongly abo[illegible] the standard of the winner and contributed out of the good[illegible] of their hearts a layette that even a queen would envy.

Imagine this list of gorgeous gifts that will come tumb[illegible] in to Miss Boston's Sally O'Neill, Miss Ethel La Pierre.

Shepard's millinery department have created a s[illegible] "Sally O'Neill" hat, the last word in Spring styles, which [illegible] will present to the winner.

LAMP SHADE MAKING IS EXPLAINED

Before we cover our shade that we started last week, I do want to say a little more about the lining.

In laying on the material, stretch it from one to three or four spikes, as many as you can cover without puckering at the bottom.

Put the pins in over the wire, which is covered with the binding, as described in the first lesson. Then overcast right onto the spikes, leaving the surplus folds to hang loose. Then sew up or down or horizontally.

All surplus ends and selvages of the lining should be on the top leaving the underneath smooth and giving a clean finish to the bottom of the shade.

Either georgette or brocaded velvet are the most fashionable for covering lamps for the living room. Taffeta is lovely for bed rooms. You can either stretch the material right across the top or you can work it in sections. If you are going to combine georgette and brocade—have one section of georgette and one of the pleated georgette.

I lined my shade with American beauty silk. Then I am having two panels of brocaded velvet, mulberry brocde on rose, and covering the other sections with pleated mulberry georgette. It is truly beautiful.

In pleating the georgette, hold one selvage to the right and one to the left. Stick your pins in on the bottom and draw it up to the top.

Put in a pin every eighth of an inch so that in one section you will have as many as 10, 20 or 40 pins. Really you need a pin over each pleat.

To hold three or four pleats, take the material under your thumb and draw it right up to the top, which will make the pleats shape in to the shape of your shade. If you wish, you can work your pleating in horizontally, and cover the seams with gold braid.

This is called the "dividing line" and you will usually find one, braid covered, between georgette and velvet, if two materials are used.

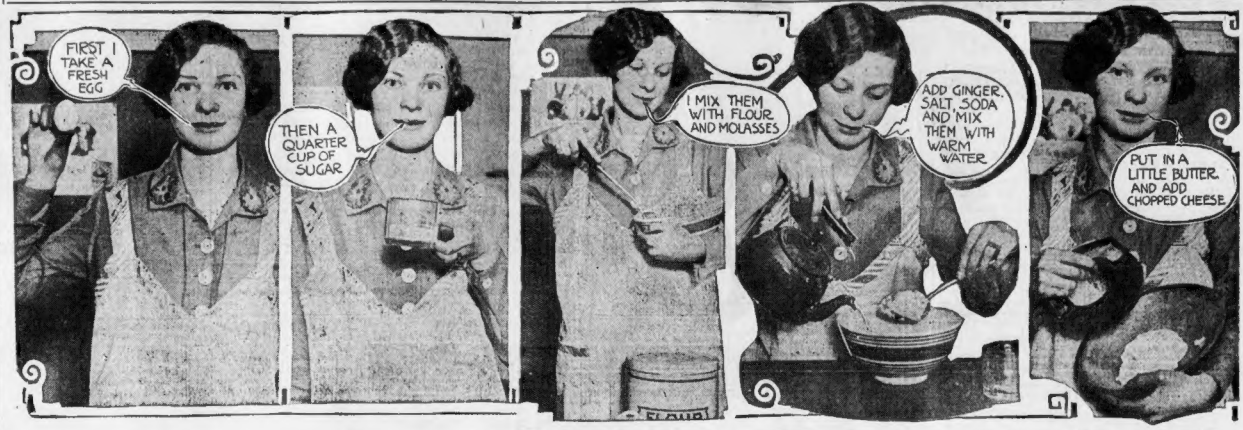
The fringe is put on before the braid around the lower edge, as the braid makes the final covering. Next week I must tell you about some wonderful new fringe and imported trimmings I've discovered.

I've asked thousands of questions of my patient instructor, so if you have any special shade problems, maybe I have collected the answers to them, or if I am stuck I will pass them along to her. I have gathered some idea of the new styles and color combinations in shades, and will enjoy helping you plan yours if you will let me.

Chinese Tea in Favor

Paris, Feb. 1.—Chinese tea seems absolutely necessary to the Parisienne who wants to be up with the latest fashion, and has wholly displaced the Indian or Ceylonese variety.

CHEESE GINGERBREAD THAT WILL WIN ANY MAN'S HEART THROUGH HIS 'TUMMY



FIRST I TAKE A FRESH EGG
THEN A QUARTER CUP OF SUGAR
I MIX THEM WITH FLOUR AND MOLASSES
ADD GINGER, SALT, SODA AND MIX THEM WITH WARM WATER
PUT IN A LITTLE BUTTER AND ADD CHOPPED CHEESE

How to Make Delicious Cheese Gingerbread

I have yet to find a man, woman or child that doesn't like gingerbread. Here's a variation of the old-fashioned variety that is even more popular.

It is especially adapted to cup cakes, but can be baked in a sheet if you prefer. To give it an especially delicious crust, sprinkle granulated sugar over the dough after it has been poured into the plan.

CHEESE GINGERBREAD

1 egg
½ cup of sugar
⅛ cup of molasses
1½ cups pastry flour
1 level tsp. soda
1 level tsp. ginger
½ tsp. salt
⅓ cup warm water
2 tbsp. shortening
1 cup chopped cheese

Beat the egg until light. Add the sugar and molasses and beat again. Mix and sift the dry ingredients, add alternately with the shortening melted in the warm water. Beat well and bake in a moderate oven. Last of all add 1 cup of chopped cheese.

Today's Thought

Dear is my friend—yet from my foe, as from my friend, comes good;
My friend shows what I can do, and my foe what I should.
—Schiller—Friend and Foe.

NAPERY AND SILVER ADD ZEST TO APPETITE

Shining table ware and beautifully ironed linen are the best possible appetizers. Even the pick up or pot luck meal should be properly served.

It's far more restful to sit at a careful laid table, with shiny silver, and eat leisurely, than to sit down at one set "hit or miss."

Don't forget what we used to write in our copy books—"Chatted food is Best Digested."

IDEAS FOR ST. VALENTINE PARTIES

You don't know what a good time I'm having planning Valentine parties for many of my club members.

I really feel that I have been to a dozen already, and have laughed and played the fascinating games, and eaten delicious heart-shaped sandwiches until there is imminent danger of a double chin appearing, and then suddenly I wake up and remember that I've only had the pleasure of planning the parties!

And now I'm going to pass on some of my ideas to you.

First, invitations—There's nothing cuter than two red hearts joined together at the top on which to convey your invitation. On the upper side of the second heart you can print neatly the time, and place and date, with an interlacing of hearts around the capital letter of each line. These you can make easily at home.

There are a myriad of fascinating games for Valentine's day—fortune telling (I have the directions for telling all sorts of laugh-provoking fortunes—just drop me a line if you'd like to have them), slipper tests, and jingles—Have you ever played jingles?—I have a heap of them entitled the "Path of True Love," that will break the ice easier than almost anything I know.

Refreshments always begin to knock at the door of the hearts of all the gentlemen present very early in the evening, so let's think of them next week.

Martha Lee's Talks to Housewives

LAMP SHADE MAKING IS EXPLAINED

Before we cover our shade that we started last week, I do want to say a little more about the lining.

In laying on the material, stretch it from one to three or four spikes, as many as you can cover without puckering at the bottom.

Put the pins in over the wire, which is covered with the binding, as described in the first lesson. Then overcast right onto the spikes, leaving the surplus folds to hang loose. Then sew up or down or horizontally.

All surplus ends and selvages of the lining should be on the top leaving the underneath smooth and giving a clean finish to the bottom of the shade.

Either georgette or brocaded velvet are the most fashionable for covering lamps for the living room. Taffeta is lovely for bed rooms. You can either stretch the material right across the top or you can work it in sections, if you are going to combine georgette and brocade—have one section of georgette and one of the pleated georgette.

I lined my shade with American beauty silk. Then I am having two panels of brocaded velvet, mulberry brocade on rose, and covering the other sections with pleated mulberry georgette. It is truly beautiful.

In pleating the georgette, hold one selvage to the right and one to the left. Stick your pins in on the bottom and draw it up to the top.

Put in a pin every eighth of an inch so that in one section you will have as many as 10, 20 or 40 pins. Really you need a pin over each pleat.

To hold three or four pleats, take the material under your thumb and draw it right up to the top, which will make the pleats shape in to the shape of your shade. If you wish, you can work your pleating in horizontally, and cover the seams with gold braid.

This is called the "dividing line" and you will usually find one, braid covered, between georgette and velvet, if two materials are used.

The fringe is put on before the braid around the lower edge, as the braid makes the final covering. Next week I must tell you about some wonderful new fringe and imported trimmings I've discovered.

I've asked thousands of questions of my patient instructor, so if you have any special shade problems, maybe I have collected the answers to them, or if I am stuck I will run them along to her. I have gathered some idea of the new styles and color combinations in shades, and will enjoy helping you plan yours if you will let me.

CHEESE GINGERBREAD THAT WILL WIN ANY MAN'S HEART THROUGH HIS 'TUMMY

FIRST I TAKE A FRESH EGG
THEN A QUARTER CUP OF SUGAR
I MIX THEM WITH FLOUR AND MOLASSES
ADD GINGER, SALT, SODA AND MIX THEM WITH WARM WATER
PUT IN A LITTLE BUTTER AND ADD CHOPPED CHEESE

How to Make Delicious Cheese Gingerbread

I have yet to find a man, woman or child that doesn't like gingerbread. Here's a variation of the old-fashioned variety that is even more popular.

It is especially adapted to cup cakes, but can be baked in a sheet if you prefer. To give it an especially delicious crust, sprinkle granulated sugar over the dough after it has been poured into the pan.

CHEESE GINGERBREAD

1 egg	1 level tsp. ginger
¼ cup of sugar	½ tsp. salt
½ cup of molasses	½ cup warm water
1½ cups pastry flour	2 tbsp. shortening
1 level tsp. soda	1 cup chopped cheese

Beat the egg until light. Add the sugar and molasses and beat again. Mix and sift the dry ingredients, add alternately with the shortening melted in the warm water. Beat well and bake in a moderate oven. Last of all add 1 cup of chopped cheese.

NAPERY AND SILVER ADD ZEST TO APPETITE

Shining table ware and beautifully ironed linen are the best possible appetizers. Even the pick up or pot luck meal should be properly served.

It's far more restful to sit at a careful laid table, with shiny silver, and eat leisurely, than to sit down at one set "hit or miss."

Don't forget what we used to write in our copy books—"Chatted food is Best Digested."

IDEAS FOR ST. VALENTINE PARTIES

You don't know what a good time I'm having planning Valentine parties for many of my club members.

I really feel that I have been to a dozen already, and have laughed and played the fascinating games, and eaten delicious heart-shaped sandwiches until there is imminent danger of a double chin appearing, and then suddenly I wake up and remember that I've only had the pleasure of planning the parties!

And now I'm going to pass on some of my ideas to you.

First, invitations—There's nothing cuter than two red hearts joined together at the top on which to convey your invitation. On the upper side of the second heart you can print neatly the time, and place and date, with an interlacing of hearts around the capital letter of each line. These you can make easily at home.

There are a myriad of fascinating games for Valentine's day—fortune telling (I have the directions for telling all sorts of laugh-provoking fortunes—just drop me a line if you'd like to have them), slipper tests, and jingles—Have you ever played jingles?—I have a heap of them entitled the "Path of True Love," that will break the ice easier than almost anything I know.

Refreshments always begin to knock at the door of the hearts of all the gentlemen present very early in the evening, so let's think of them next week.

GIRL TELLS HER OWN STORY OF RUM-RUNNING

would meet his priests and plead logs with cold figures in our accounts, the growing debit column and the heap of bills that customers owed us and had put off paying from month to month.

I want to say right at the outset in justice to my husband that he had no part in my acts. Frank Stone is an industrious, honest, law abiding citizen. If I had heeded him I wouldn't be here today.

But strange to say I'm not a bit sorry for what I have done. I have received respect in district parlance this term is used), and I wouldn't ask to be any other girl or woman to engage in bootlegging.

Seller and Buyer

It's too risky and perse wra king it pays and it doesn't pay. By that I mean a woman may make money but the law and decent folks are right in condemning it. And this brings me to one of the strangest angles of my case.

While I knew in my heart I was doing outlaw and that it was wrong and dangerous for me to deal liquor (Mrs. Stone always used the verb "deal" or dealing") I can't make myself feel sorry

I cannot convince myself that I am any worse than the fine ladies and gentlemen who hold their heads high in the community while they buy and drink liquor on the sly, and who, by their orders for more, ever more, encourage someone openly to scoff at the law which they shrink from violating in the open.

I felt that I had a reason and they didn't have any motive but pleasure. This line of reasoning made me turn a deaf ear to my husband and the few other persons who knew what I was contemplating. My father and mother, relatives, friends and above all my neighbors, never suspected what I was doing. For my mother's sake I must not make public my maiden name.

I'm not ashamed of my record as a bootlegger, but I'm not proud of it. I have a great deal to my credit. I have made a nice sum of money. I had always done my business by motoring from town to town, as the number orders and intricacy of it kept me away from home a great deal, so that when I operated elsewhere as a bootlegger nobody noticed it.

Really I served another purpose as an expert driver. Time and again with motor cycle officers on the trail influenced the deciding to become a bootlegger. Otherwise I might have been asked to face the ordeal of night riding alone, but I had done so much in connection with our lumber business that it seemed part of my routine.

I enjoyed the home part of it, the cooking, washing dishes, keeping the books or typewriting for my husband. I began to study road maps leading to the Canadian border. I did much planning lying awake in bed. There were weeks of indecision and worry. I actually felt relieved when I made up my mind.

As you can see there isn't much of the desperado about me. I didn't intend to be vicious. It isn't in my make-up. I didn't wish to make trouble or to harm anyone. I never went armed.

I felt that the presence of a revolver on me or in my car might lead to unlooked for complications. I preferred to depend upon my wits. And they worked more than once.

But I can use a revolver or rifle. I handled a rifle from girlhood and am a pretty good shot. Firearms are dangerous in such a calling, however.

I did my utmost to play down the outlaw element and to face the job on business lines. I entered it purely as a business proposition and not for excitement or adventure.

In the days when I faltered and didn't know what to do, a glance at the debit column in my husband's books which I kept would revive feelings of wretchedness and make me bold.

Week-ends which used to be so pleasant soon came to be dreaded. My husband never lost patience. He kept saying luck would turn, but I kept a closer scan of the figures than he did and my books told only too plainly of an impending crash.

We had worked so hard together I hated to think of losing our business. Frank who had been in the lumber business long before our marriage, used to accept my advice on contracts and other things, so that we were really a firm. I felt as much responsible as he did. That's why I worried so. I guess.

I read in a newspaper of the activities of bootleggers. I had heard rumors in village gossip of fabulous sums made in the traffic. I soon found myself reading everything I could get on the subject and studying every map I could lay my hands on. My motor trips on business had made me more or less conversant with the roads, but when I began to decide to become a bootlegger I studied the maps with greater care, wishing to lay out routes that would insure safety and profit.

Money, quick money, in large sums is what I craved. Our customers were slow in paying. I acted as collector and found collections discouragingly slow. I hated to come home to Frank empty handed.

Finally things came to such a pass with the bills piling up that drastic action was necessary to escape disaster. I felt it was up to me. After one of my bluest days and a sleepless night, a young fellow, whom I will call Dick C——, came to West Halifax and to our mill and home. His visit proved a turning point in my life. Through the knowledge I secretly gained from him, I, Hilda Stone, became a bootlegger.

In the second chapter of her amazing life story tomorrow Hilda Stone will tell how Tony initiated her in the mysteries of bootlegging.

SECOND DANCE OF 'OLD TIMES' WEDNESDAY

The time is narrowing down and there are but two days now to call before the second old time dance of the Boston American to under way in full swing of partners at the Strand Ballroom, No 1 Huntington avenue

It's on next Wednesday night, and because of the great demand tickets will be sold at the door as well as in advance.

There has been a heavy demand for tickets since announcement of the second dance was made, and the Strand Ballroom, where one batch is being sold, and Classified Corner, No. 91 Summer street, other place of sale, have been doing a rushing business. The tickets are 50 cents each.

There will be all the old-time dances brought back into favor by Henry Ford—the varsovienne, the Virginia reel, polka, Portland fancy, mazurka, schottische, galop and the others—but the big event for the dancers will be the prize waltz, for which three prizes are offered.

Rosalie Hawley, pretty but lacking a partner, will take part in the prize waltz. She has had many responses to her appeal for a skillful partner in the waltz and she will make her selection today, undoubtedly. Be patient, boys.

All are eligible for the prize waltz, except the winning couple in the first one, and all are eligible in the fiddlers' contest except the last winner.

SAVED IN FIRE, HE DIES GOING TO HOSPITAL

Canton, Feb. 1—George H. Marlow, fifty-four, was rescued from his flaming room in Brown's lodging house, No. 703 Washington street, today, only to die in an ambulance while being rushed to the Norwood Hospital.

Twenty other lodgers who had just retired, were driven to the icy street in the sweep of the flames that damaged the building to the extent of $1,500.

It is believed that Marlow had been smoking in bed. Smoke was discovered pouring from the transom over his door by Mrs. Brown, wife of the proprietor, who sounded the alarm.

Firemen used a ladder to bring the unconscious lodger out of his room and he was started in a cabin enroute to the hospital.

DOG'S WARNING SAVES TWO AS HOME BURNS

Worcester, Feb. 1.—Down in a lower room the pet collie dog of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Parkins of Holden barked excitedly today, and his owners, asleep upstairs, were brought to wakefulness.

An hour later the $7,000 Parkins home lay in glowing ashes, but the dog and his master and mistress had escaped the flames, due to the watchfulness of the collie.

The home was only a short distance from the spot where six persons in the Howe family left their lives by a fire a few weeks ago, and Mr. and Mrs. Parkins would have met the same fate if their dog had not barked a warning.

The couple fled the house, saving only their nightclothing, and a few minutes after they had left, the staircase was a flamesred flue.

Parkins, following the fire planned soft coal for the blaze, declaring he believed the coal had filled the chimney with soot and the soot had become ignited.

Radio is Best Thriller for Mary Garden

New York, Feb. 1 (A.P.).—Mary Garden, Chicago Opera prima donna, who admits that the radio fascinates her, will make her debut on the air tonight.

Miss Garden, who recently returned from a rest at her villa in Monte Carlo and from her widely known "sun baths," discovered the thrill of wireless communication abroad.

"The radio gives me more emotion than any man I ever met in my life," she said on her arrival here December 9.

Miss Garden will go on at 9 p. m. Eastern time at WJZ.

RAIDERS SEIZE LYNN MAN IN GIRL'S ROOM

Employed by Mrs. Edward Cruise of Lynn, detectives of the Wolf agency with patrolmen from the Brighton division, raided the apartment of Alice E. Galvin in Commonwealth avenue and, according to their testimony in court today, found Cruise hiding behind a door and garbed in a Turkish towel while Miss Galvin wore a bit of negligee.

The raiders had seen Cruise meet Miss Galvin at the door, they testified, and then forced their way in. Cruise's brother-in-law, John Fay of Lynn, accompanied the raiders.

The case of Cruise and Miss Galvin was continued in Brighton Court to February 9

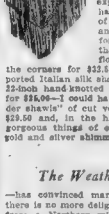
—I've made a most wonderful discovery! I saw in the window of E. W. Burt's smart shoe store at 27 West Street a pair of modified Ground Gripper pumps made in a one eyelet tie, and with them a beautiful silver prize [illegible] who was won by a talente Italian mesa[illegible] in the recent [illegible] contest held by the Boston Evening American.

In answer to my inquiries I learned that on Monday, a young lady had asked one of Burt's expert fitters for a medium toe pump, of smart appearance with medium heel, for real comfort in dancing. This difficult request was supplied, also with a pair of modified Ground Gripper pumps, and the lady—a well-known dancer—who bought them on Monday, wore them that same evening at The Strand Ball Room, winning the cup in the Waltz contest! It is wonderful to know that one's feet can be at once so smart and so comfortable—for the fortunate lady danced every dance all that evening in these effective pump pumps without a trace of discomfort!

Shawls—Shawls—Shawls

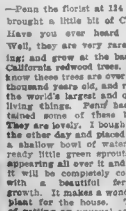
—at the opera, where the audience is probably the most brilliant in the history of Boston, the dominant feature among the beautifully-dressed women are their SHAWLS. No single item of dress for the evening is so important. The most simple costume is made complete and effective by the shawls that are so much the rage at present.



And to my utter astonishment I've discovered that I can have this smart and becoming accessory without great expense! At Filene's they have embroidered shawls of heavenly colors, with an eighteen-inch fringe for only $28.50. Others there are, with great flowers embroidered in the corners for $32.50! Also, my dear, imported Italian silk shawls in soft colors with 22-inch hand knotted fringe almost like lace for $25.00—I could hardly believe it! "Shoulder shawls" of cut velvet in every color for $29.50 and, in the higher prices, there are gorgeous things of embroidered silk and of gold and silver shimmer.

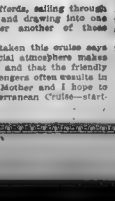
I Was Enchanted Yesterday

—with the really exquisite things on sale and at greatly reduced prices at Otto J. Fiehler, Inc., 407 Boylston Street. This smart shop has the cachet of supplying Boston's Fashionables with the beautiful furs and perfect appointments that we are all hunting these days, and the prices at this sale are quite unbelievable. There are lovely imported beaded bags for the evening, reduced to $7.95, in bewildering colors—shopping bags of silk and leather in the latest models and only $8.75 — and among the other charming accessories on sale were flat cigarette cases of black silk or suede for the feminine smoker, with amber holder included—quite the smartest things I've seen and only $5.75. You will be fascinated by this shop and the taste shown in these exquisite appointments which are being sold at extraordinary reductions.



The Weather Lately—

—has convinced many of my friends that there is no more delightful way of recovering from a Northern winter than to, join the Raymond-Whitcomb Mediterranean Cruise, which starts on April 3d for the sunny seas and romantic ports of the Mediterranean. At the Raymond and Whitcomb booking office at 165 Tremont Street you can get all the information about the palatial Cunarder "Carinthia", on which the coming tour is to be made, and to make such a cruise on such a boat, will be the experience of a lifetime.

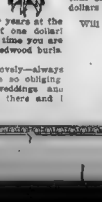


Imagine in such luxury as this ship affords, sailing through that "wine-dark" sea and drawing into one romantic seaport after another of those history-laden lands!

Everyone who has taken this cruise says that the delightful social atmosphere makes for perfect enjoyment, and that the friendly spirit among the passengers often results in life-long friendships. Mother and I hope to go on the next Mediterranean Cruise—starting April 3d.

Redwood Burls in Bowls

—From the florist at 124 Tremont Street has brought a little bit of California to Boston. Have you ever heard of redwood burls? Well, they are very rare and most interesting; and grew at the base of the wonderful California redwood trees. You know theee trees are over four thousand years old, and really the world's most and oldest living things. Penn has obtained some of these burls. They are lovely. I bought one the other day, and placed it in a shallow bowl of water. Already little green sprouts are appearing all over it, and soon it will be completely covered with a beautiful fern-like growth. It makes a wonderful plant for the house. Think of getting an unusual and interesting plant that will live for years at the amazingly small expenditure of one dollar!



Do run in to Penn's the next time you are in town and get one of these redwood burls. I know you will enjoy it.

Penn's flowers are simply lovely—always fresh and beautiful. They are so obliging too, about decorations for weddings and parties. I always go straight there and I get the best.

There Is No More Fashionable

—hotel in the world than the Copley-Plaza, and yet one can lunch there among the smartest people in Boston—natives and visitors—for just $1.35. The management makes a specialty of this five-course table d'hote luncheon, served in the cafe. Yesterday for that small sum of $1.25, I had a choice of grapefruit or oysters or clams, fish, a meat course with vegetable salad, dessert and coffee. This table d'hote luncheon brings together a very fashionable crowd, and as you see, it's extraordinarily reasonable in price

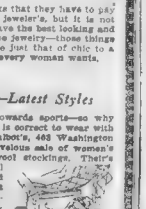
The Saturday afternoon tea dances at the Copley-Plaza are more and more the rage among those who like to dance or to watch others dancing. It is served in the main tea room every Saturday afternoon from four to seven, while dance music by the Copley-Plaza Orchestra and a perfect floor make a heavenly combination for the dancers. With all this, and a delicious tea, the charges are only $1.50 —no wonder it is the smart thing to do on Saturday afternoons.

I Went Along to Long's

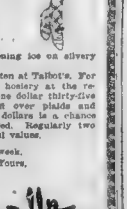
—and there in their beautiful new store at 42 Summer Street were the best silk umbrellas I have seen in ages. The good looking, stubby kind, with sixteen ribs. Attractive red, green, brown, blue and pansy, in excellent quality pure silk. They match stylish clothes and drive away the rain with their brightness. Really lovely and only five dollars. They regularly sell for six fifty up. One dangling from a dainty wrist by a heavy silk cord attached to an awfully pretty handle is the last word from Paris for these coming rainy months. Amber tips at the end of every rib lend added charm to the toute ensemble.



One very often thinks that they have to pay more for things at a jeweler's, but it is not so at Long's. They have the best looking and latest styled in costume jewelry—those things that complete and give just that of chic to a modish costume that every woman wants.

Sport Styles—Latest Styles

—Everything tends towards sports—so why not have hosiery that is correct to wear with your sport attire? Talbot's, 403 Washington St. are having a marvelous sale of women's fine cashmere and wool stockings. Their's are the best type full fashioned imported hosiery of the finest grade, made to sell regularly for four-fifty. Now only two-fifty-five a pair or two pair for five dollars! All sizes. The styles are varied —smart two tone diamonds, stylish plaids and fashionable combinations.



Jacquard patterns are the bright spot on the landscape when one is gliding over the glistening ice on silvery skates.

The men are not forgotten at Talbot's. For them are beautiful wool hosiery at the remarkable low figure of one dollar thirty-five a pair. English modes over plaids and stripes. Three for four dollars is a chance that should not be missed. Regularly two dollars a pair. Wonderful values.

Will write again next week.

Yours,

Priscilla

Radio Queries

Q. B. F. Watertown. I have heard of a scheme whereby a radio aerial may be brought to the set from outside the window without boring any holes or using any tubes, etc. I believe it is fed to the set on the window jamb. Can you enlighten me?

A. Yes. This scheme consists of utilizing the window brass as the dielectric of a series antenna condenser. You simply cement a piece of thin sheet copper 3 inches by 6 inches in diameter on each side of the window pane and have them exactly opposite each other. The antenna wire from the outside connects with the copper piece on the outside of the window pane and the lead-in wire connects with the copper piece on the inside. The inside piece of foil connects with the antenna post of your receiver. The bigger your antenna the smaller condenser can be. The two foil discs ...

The tubes have all been tested, and the batteries are all new.

BOSTON, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1926

SECOND SECTION

A Live Serial of Love and Temptation Right Here In Boston

READ THIS FIRST:

FLOSSIE and MARY ROSE MIDDLETON are two pretty sisters, the daughters of a widowed mother. They both work for Dexter & Co., big Congress street bond firm.

Mary Rose is secretary to JOHN MANNERS, the sales manager, and is in love with him. But he is engaged to DORIS HINIG, an heiress. Because of her feeling for him, Mary Rose repeatedly refuses to marry TOM FITZROY, a young doctor.

Flossie, a born flirt, is carrying on a flirtation with the head of the concern, HILARY DEXTER, although she's engaged to Dexter's secretary, SAM JESSUP. She stays out with Dexter, joy-riding in his car, until all hours, and the girls' mother, MRS. MIDDLETON, can do nothing with her.

John Manners falls in love with Mary Rose, and tells her that although he is bound to marry Doris Hinig, he will always love only her. The sisters quarrel. And to get even with Mary Rose, Flossie tells Manners that she's just "stringing him along" and really adores Tom Fitzroy and means to marry him. Mary Rose wonders at Manners' sudden coldness toward her.

MRS. DEXTER finds Flossie's vanity case in her husband's car. When she comes to his office to tell him that she's going to divorce him, she mistakes Mary Rose for the guilty Flossie, and loudly accuses her of running around with Dexter. The girls in the office hear the undeserved tongue lashing that Mary Rose receives, and begin to shun her, thinking that she really has been trying to "vamp" the Big Boss.

Flossie, the real culprit, begs her not to tell that it was really she who had been out with Dexter, because she's afraid that if Sam Jessup finds it out he won't marry her. So Mary Rose, who hopes that Sam will marry Flossie and get her away from Dexter, takes the blame. One night Flossie "ditches" Sam at an office party, and goes riding with Dexter. Then she finds out how Dexter really regards her—as a pretty girl for a light love affair and nothing else.

CHAPTER XLV

At seven the next morning, Mary Rose shook Flossie to waken her.

"I've let you sleep as long as you can, honey," she said as the young er girl drowsily opened her blue eyes with their fringe of long black lashes. "You'll be late for work if you don't jump right up, now."

Flossie frowned, and turned her face to the wall. "Oh, Mary Rose, what did you wake me for?" she grumbled. "You're always throwing the soap in the soup! You know I'm not going to work today."

Mary Rose stood silent for a minute, looking down at her.

"But you ought to go back and finish out your week at the office," she said finally. "You may be sore at Dexter and you should be, but it's not fair to leave the firm high and dry like this."

Flossie rolled over in bed and looked up at her with surprise written all across her lovely face.

"You are a dumb-bell aren't you Mary Rose?" she asked. "I suppose you just can't help it! Now why should I be fair with a man like Dexter who's given me the rotten deal that he has? I'm just tickled to death to leave him with no one to take care of his darned old files, believe you me!"

Mary Rose flushed. "I may be a dumb-bell, I admit," she said quietly. "But I'd do my duty, no matter how hard it was—"

"Oh, run around the block!" Flossie broke in impatiently. "You save me a pain in the thorax with your talk about duty!"

She jumped out of bed and ran across the room in her bare feet.

"Mother!" she called shrilly down the stairs. "Mother, can I have my coffee up here in bed?"

"Yes, darling," came Mrs. Middleton's voice faintly, in answer.

Flossie picked up her comb and

CHAMBER OPPOSES TAX LAW CHANGES

The report of the committee on taxation of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, regarding the restriction of real estate investments by proposed changes in the revenue act of 1924, recommends that the act continue in force as is.

At present the restriction requiring only to the extent to which depreciation has been taken is income tax returns. The proposed change would permit depreciation prior to March 1, 1913, before the income tax was in effect.

GALLIVAN HITS FAKE PATRIOTS

Congressman Won't Join So. Boston Fete if It Is Run by "Outsiders"

Congressman James A. Gallivan will have nothing at all to do with the Evacuation Day celebration in South Boston on March 17 "if any individuals or fake patriotic societies are successful in their efforts to take the celebration out of the hands of my fellow citizens of South Boston."

Congressman "Jim" declared that this is his ultimatum. He went on to say:

"Until former Lieutenant-Governor Edward P. Barry discovered that the British had evacuated Boston by way of South Boston, none of those would be patriotic societies ever took the slightest interest in celebrating the anniversary."

The Sons of the American Revolution received a share of the Gallivan censure.

"The descendants of the British Tories, he said, "who deserted the colors six after the failure at Concord, Lexington and Bunker Hill and who returned from the Provinces after the British were driven out of South Boston, organized themselves into some such societies as the Sons of the American Revolution.

"God knows where they ever came from.

"I ought to know something about it, as I was born in south Boston, and I believe that the United Sons of the Fiji Islands are just as much entitled to recognition as these professional guardians of American liberties in Boston."

BIG DEFICIT ON 'L' ROAD OVERCOME

$502,000 Profit in 1925 Is Shown Against $636,000 Loss in 1924

The Boston Elevated Railway took in $502,193.85 above the cost of service in 1925, according to the report of the Public Trustees, filed at the State House today.

The report shows total receipts of $14,[illegible] and cost of service $[illegible], as compared to a deficit of $[illegible] in 1924.

The trustees also reported that the seventh full year of public operations closed on June 30, 1925, with a balance of receipts over cost of service of $70,581.83, which was repaid to cities and towns served by the railway.

The report added that a gratifying increase in riding and revenue during the latter part of 1925 and early 1926 has permitted the resumption of full-time work in the shops and a substantial increase in the number of car trips and car miles operated.

In order to meet the situation created by the 1924 wage award, according to the trustees, the car repair shops were operated through out the greater part of the year on a 5-day week, track reconstruction was reduced somewhat below the average amount necessary, car mile age operated was reduced 800,000, one-man car operation was considerably increased and many lesser economies put in effect.

Reduction in most of power and cost of accidents, together with an increase of $356,716.13 in operating revenues, materially assisted in reaching the favorable result shown, the report stated.

MORE BUS LINES.

Referring to bus lines the trustees reiterated their previous contention that competing lines constitute a direct loss to the Commonwealth, although stating they had no objection to through bus lines.

At the present time there are 75 routes in operation, employing 157 machines, the report stated the mileage operated having increased from 63,937 in 1922 to 2,472,476 in 1925.

Referring to the attempt to secure parking of automobiles outside the congested centers, by leasing land near the Everett Terminal for this purpose the report stated that direct connection of a large garage adjacent to the Kendall Square station awaits action by the Legislature.

QUEEN'S COUNSEL

by Marie Queen of Rumania

BEING EASY TO LIVE WITH

OF COURSE, it is never really easy to live with anybody.

But the most trying sort of people to live with are those who cannot leave well enough alone, who are forever nagging at others, interfering in things that do not matter, stirring up disagreeable questions instead of letting sleeping dogs lie.

Touchy ones are also impossible to abide in everyday life. They are continually searching, and, alas, finding, occasions to be offended and to sulk. One never knows where one has failed. The offended one (they call it "hurt") meets you with tight-shut lips and with an icy atmosphere around her, makes you feel an outcast in your own home, makes you feel that neither God, man nor beast has any use for you.

I say "her" because women are past mistresses of this game of petty offence. Men have other ways of being insupportable to live with. They are selfish, bad-tempered, grumbly, intolerant. They scare their wives and children till everyone moves about with bated breath and anxious looks.

Good cheer, consideration, helpfulness—these make you easy to live with. Small attentions, not too obtrusive, help make life livable, make the air around you sweet with love and good-will.

What is more delightful than to know there is someone waiting at home for you each day, someone full of pleasure at your return, bright with kindly greeting, interested in all your doings and efforts?

People who are unwilling to make an effort at pleasant companionship are better off living alone. Yet I think it is not normal so to live. The ideal person to live with is one who loves to listen, one whom you can joke and laugh with, who understands fun and who, if need be, can also discuss a serious question intelligently and offer good advice.

There are those whose very presence clears an oppressive atmosphere, who cause a stir of pleasure when they enter a room.

We can all become at least passably easy to live with by cultivating the habit of simple good humor, by a determination not to sulk, not to be touchy, not to be too self important.

And when we ARE a joy to our household, we reap joy a hundredfold.

WIFE SAYS CHILD WAS 'KIDNAPED'

Harvard Grad Refuses to Surrender Boy to Sheriff Sent to House by Judge

Wayne C. Holsworth, Cambridge architect and Harvard graduate, was adjudged in contempt of court by Judge McCoole in Norfork Probate Court today. Incidentally, if his wife, Mrs. Doris C. Holsworth, carries out her threat, she will apply for a warrant for his arrest on the charge of kidnaping his son Charles.

After the Holsworths separated some time ago there began a long legal battle for custody of their two children.

On January 21, Mrs. Holsworth was granted the custody of the two, but the father was permitted to see them at specified times.

Last Wednesday, Mrs. Holsworth told the court, her husband visited her Jamaica Plain apartment and asked to see Charles. She agreed, and further allowed the father to take the boy out for a walk. He did not return, she says.

SHERIFF BARRED OUT.

On Friday she told her story to Judge McCoole and he sent Deputy Sheriff Lynch to Holsworth's home on Ellery street, Cambridge, with a capias demanding the return of the child.

Holsworth, according to Lynch's report, refused to let the deputy sheriff enter the house. The capias did not entitle the officer to enter by force; neither would the summons on the contempt charge.

Mrs. Holsworth thereupon left Dedham for the West Roxbury Court, where she said she would seek a warrant against her husband on the alleged kidnaping charge. This warrant, if granted, will permit the police to enter the Ellery street home.

1 CONSCIENCE, FOR 2,000,000, NICHOLS' IDEA

Mayor Nichols came out flat footedly in favor of the amalgamation of surrounding cities and towns into a Greater Boston today in an address at the City Club at a luncheon given in his honor by the members.

"My bill for the Legislature for having a Greater Boston named in the census has been declared an entering wedge for the plan of amalgamating the cities and towns into a Greater Boston. It is exactly that," he said.

"I think we should have a Greater Boston of at least 3,000,000 souls with one community consciousness."

The Mayor said that the Boston police force according to his figures, do about two thirds of the work of the police in the surrounding cities and towns, and he proposed that the Legislature should grant Boston more money for its police, particularly making the cities and towns, as their share in the maintenance of the Boston force.

The Mayor made another somewhat drastic suggestion when he said: "I believe that the Mayor of Boston should sit ex-officio on the board of directors of the Elevated and every other metropolitan conduit of the kind."

REVERE PAYMASTER NABS AUTO THIEF IN SCUFFLE

Automobile thieves tried to steal the car of Eddie Ahearn, paymaster for the city of Revere. In the melee that ensued when Eddie discovered the theft he got back his machine, one of the alleged thieves, and a black eye. "Eddie" had parked his car at Ocean avenue, Revere, and, happening to turn, he saw two men seated in it ready to start. He rushed back and there was a scuffle. "Eddie" admits he was getting the worst of it from the pair when Patrolman Sweeney rushed to his aid. One man escaped, the other, giving the name, Tony Cataldo of Revere, was arrested.

OCEAN FLIERS NEAR DISASTER

Pernambuco, Brazil, Feb. 1 (A P.)—It was revealed today the Spanish Transatlantic fliers were threatened with disaster near the end of their brief hop from Fernando Noronha to this city yesterday.

The information became public when the Spanish consulate sent a communication to the newspapers explaining that Commander Franco and his crew came down on the water without first flying over the city because, when near Recife, a part of one of the propellers broke.

The fliers found it necessary to throw overboard all clothing and tools to lighten the plane and avert a probable tragedy.

EASTERN RAIL MEN ASK RAISE

New York, Feb. 1 (A P.)—Eastern railroads today received demands for increased pay for trainmen and conductors and were given until March 2 to make their answer.

The increased demanded amounts to about $1 a day.

The demands were contained in joint letters from the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors. Each railroad received a letter and was asked to make a reply to the demands. Only minor changes in working conditions were requested. Granting of the requests, increase would restore the wage scales fixed by the Railway Labor Board in 1920, the highest wage scales in the history of the railroads.

When it became known last week that trainmen and conductors were preparing to make the demands, spokesmen for the railroads said such restoration would increase the total annual expenses of the companies by $500,000,000.

HELEN WILLS WINS SECOND NET TOURNEY

American Girl and Mlle. Lenglen May Meet in the Doubles This Week

Cannes, Feb. 1 (A.P.)—Helen Wills won the singles [illegible] tennis tourney today defeating Mlle. Constantaras, the French champion, 6-3, 6-2.

Miss Wills [illegible] tournament on the Riviera, the first being the Metropole, in the final of which she downed Mlle. Vlasto, France's second ranking player.

Today's match was made difficult for the American because of her opponent's insistence upon playing an overhead game in which Miss Wills is not at her best.

The Greek girl won the first two games of the opening set. Miss Wills then carried five straight, dropped the eighth and won the set with a love set. The second set was a more one-sided Lenglen, it was remarked [illegible] doubles [illegible] participated that Miss Wills and Aeschilmann will face Mlle. Lenglen and Baron de Morpurgo in the Nice finals. This match is anxiously awaited, for it will give an inkling as to the relative play of the French champion and the American star.

Cannes, Feb. 1 (A.P.).—When Helen Wills is to meet Suzanne Lenglen in a battle across the nets for tennis supremacy cannot be foretold, certainly it will not be during the present week, and possibly not next week.

Miss Wills has definitely withdrawn from the singles in the Nice tournament, commencing today, and in which Suzanne was a heated entrant.

There was considerable comment Saturday when Mlle. Lenglen announced that she would play in the Nice singles. Reference was made to the fact that Suzanne had announced her intention to play only after it had become known that Miss Wills had decided to draw out of the Nice tournament.

This settled the French flash and she announced that she would scratch. Then she changed her mind. The first draw did not contain the name of the Nice girl in the singles, and when it was found by the tennis authorities that she finally had decided to play it was thought that draw would have to be made over again.

Finlay, however, the difficulty was overcome by seeding Suzanne and giving her a bye. She will play in the upper half.

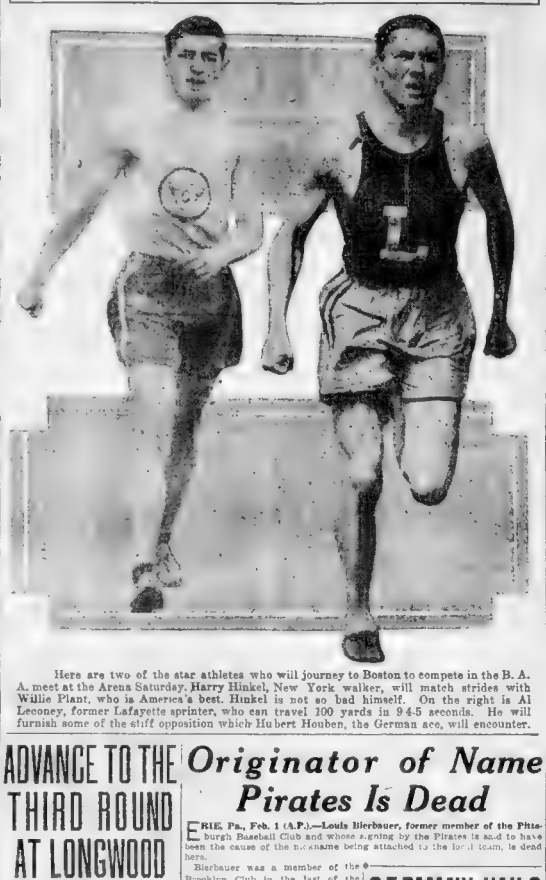
Mlle. Lenglen also will play in the women's doubles and mixed doubles. Miss Wills is similarly entered in these events, and it is possible that she and Mlle. Lenglen will face one another in them.

HAWKES WINS TENNIS TITLE OF AUSTRALASIA

Adelaide, Australia, Feb. 1 (A.P.).—H. B. Hawkes, won the lawn tennis singles championship of Australasia today, defeating J. O. Willard in straight sets in the final match here today, 6-1, 6-3, 6-1.

Paired with Gerald Patterson, Hawkes won the men's doubles championship, defeating J. O. Anderson and Pat O'Hara Wood, 6-1, 6-4, 6-2.

To Walk and Run in B.A.A. Meet



Here are two of the star athletes who will journey to Boston to compete in the B. A. A. meet at the Arena Saturday. Harry Hinkel, New York walker, will match strides with Willie Plant, who is America's best. Hinkel is not so bad himself. On the right is Al Leconey, former Lafayette sprinter, who can travel 100 yards in 9 4-5 seconds. He will furnish some of the stiff opposition which Hubert Houben, the German ace, will encounter.

ENGLISH HIGH HAS STRONG TRACK TEAM

By EDDIE DONDERO

It is highly probable that Leo Daley's famous coterie of English High wooden saucer artists will finish among the leading contenders for track and field honors this season. Coach Daley has already forwarded a tentative list of entries to the State meet which comes on March 6 at the East Armory.

An able and experienced group of performers are now preparing for this classic. The speed merchants are led by Captain Thomas Meagher, the 1,000 yarder par excellence. If time trials mean anything it is safe to say that he will not have much trouble winning that event on the Armory boards.

Meagher and his teammate, Johnny Brice, are specialists at this distance. Benjamin Bereson and Clarence Tyler, the sprinters on Daley's varsity squad, have been warming up for a big indoor season. Gladstone Scott, Herbert Ashlinger and Robert Quirk comprise the list of 300-yarders.

In the field events David Feldman and Scott Feldman are sure to be found among the point scorers.

John Daley and Edward Adard are capable of taking good care of the 600-yard run.

According to the management of the State carnival, Townsend High was the first school to get under the fold, entering Clifford Montague, Donald Hartford, Charles Jodrey and Roger Sherwin. Each of these youths will compete in two events. Ten speedsters from Dorchester have also taken into the Boston Trade School, with Jimmy Lewis who established the record in the low hurdle event last year, and Alwin Perrineau, holder of the standing broad jump record, has more than a chance of sneaking away with the laurels.

FLATLEY CALLS 'EM

Speed is Everything.
Dundee All Through The Resin Ball.
Go South, Young Man.

By NICK FLATLEY

JOHNNY DUNDEE, fighting to get back into select lightweight circles, is roundly licked. He had the cunning and generalship, says one report, to last the ten rounds, but he needed the old speed.

That's a fatal lack, the absence of speed. Brain and heart are useless if the muscles, stretched and drying with the years, cannot respond. The power of youth will wear down all the skill in the world eventually.

Dundee was given a great reception as he tottered out of the ring, but he made a mistake in trying to come back. He has been giving and taking thumps too long. He has had 343 fights, and headlive titles. That should more than satisfy any one mortal.

Nick Flatley

LITTLE DUNDEE has taken in several huge fortunes in his days. He collected all sorts of purses. He received two dollars for his first fight, and had to split that with a manager. He has had three or four quarters in which his share was more than $25,000.

He liquidated his money just as [illegible] straight. The body was more powerful than the bankroll. Johnny still tough and rough, regards it as all the pounding. But ten dollars have all faded out on him. That's why he's making his pitiable effort to get back.

THE resin ball has been accepted finally, and the pitchers will [illegible] to learn a lot [illegible] to return effectively. [illegible] baseball for the past four years the knuckler has been having all the worst of it. They couldn't fuss with the marbles, and the onion was made lively.

Judicious use of the resin was, in the opinion of most of the managers, give the fingers something to work with. Which will not harm the game. The public has had enough high scoring and slugging. A spell of box duelling will be welcome.

DAVE BANCROFT and Judge Fuchs of the Braves got a score of letters each week from would-be athletes. Some of them are written in the best Ring Lardner style, but the kind hearted pair refuse to let them loose on an unsuspecting world.

Most of the correspondents are "cuckoos," like the famous Mister Faust of the Giants, but there's always likely to be a real ball player mixed up in the bunch. After seeing some of the diamond travelers that cost way up in the thousands, the Judge looks on a training trip expense bill for a boy as so much cigarette money.

"If we make fifty mistakes and get one ball player," he explains, "we're ahead of the game. Some of the kids that are boosted must have ability. A good player today costs at least $25,000. And then he's a gamble. That much money would take a lot of kids South."

THERE has been a lot of internal dissatisfaction and bickering over schedule arrangements in both big leagues. The shortening of the season made things rather rough on the clubs that can't play Sunday ball at home.

Reports from the front have it that [illegible] committee has finally ironed things out to the general satisfaction of all.

SENATORS GET BULLET JOE BUSH

The Washington Senators [illegible] hit ring up. Their first big trade announced today, shows that. Bullet Joseph Bush, former Red Sox star, and Johnny Tobin, baseball's greatest bunter, have been secured by Stanley Harris from the St. Louis Browns. Southpaw Tom Zachary and Pitcher Win Ballou went in exchange.

A pitcher like Bush would have won the World Series against the Pirates last Fall for the American League champions. That's why the fork ball wonder has been corralled.

Harris, the youngest manager in baseball likes veterans. His baseball policy, often expressed, is as follows:

"Give me a few real hitters and enough kids to make a team fast and a bunch of old-timers who know the game. They may be good for one year only, but every championship is a fight by itself."

Harris grabbed enough veteran material last year to win his second pennant, and proposes to follow the same plan in the next race.

Bush was out of the game most of last season, and is a doubtful asset, but he can be used as a pinch hitter or stuck in occasionally where finesse might win a game. For years Johnny has been baseball's leading exponent of the sacrifice hit.

Bush, though he has been pitching for many years, was as good as ever last season. He has one of those rubber arms that never wear out.

Zachary was a hero in the '24 series, but wasn't used last Fall. He had an ailing arm all season, as a matter of fact, and his record doesn't compare with Bush's. The southpaw is almost as old as Bullet Joe although he hasn't been up in the large show so long.

Ballou is a youngster who showed much promise late in the campaign. He was put into two of the World Series games, a rigorous nerve test for a kid pitcher, and came through splendidly. He looks like one of the boys who would make the grade within a year or two.

Originator of Name Pirates Is Dead

ERIE, Pa., Feb. 1 (A.P.).—Louis Bierbauer, former member of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club and whose signing by the Pirates is said to have been the cause of the nickname being attached to the local team, is dead here.

Bierbauer was a member of the Brooklyn Club in the last of the brotherhood, 1891. He was ordered to return to the Athletics, but that club forgot to list him on the reserve list. Ned Hanlon, then manager of the Pittsburgh club, signer Bierbauer. A court decision held the Pittsburgh club was justified in its action as Bierbauer was a free agent. The name "Pirate" was hailed as the appellation following season by the fans, and has stuck ever since.

GERMANY HAILS OUR RECEPTION OF HOUBEN

An International News Service dispatch from Berlin announces that the German newspapers today lavished praise upon American sports followers for the spirit displayed in cheering the debut on an American track of Hubert Houben, the German sprint champion, despite the fact that Houben finished fifteenth.

The newspapers hailed the ovation given to Houben as [illegible] aiding that the anti-German feeling aroused by the war had practically ceased to exist. Houben's visit to the United States was described as being of equal importance with the missions of business men and financiers.

Houben ran in the forty-yard dash at the Knights of Columbus games in Boston on Saturday. His bad showing was attributed to a cold.

National League to Dine Tuesday

New York, Feb. 1 (A.P.)—Baseball, resined and otherwise will be batted about New York [illegible] next three days.

On Tuesday, the National League will close its jubilee year celebration with a dinner at the Astor to be attended by officials of government and State and baseball men from all over the United States. The schedule makers and their years work on Wednesday.

The writers have [illegible] at the commodore last night, spared no one. Someone had penned the following lines and the scribes dared to read them:

"Ken Landis and Ben Johnson, they had a head-on scrap.
"Ken Landis got the verdict, but John got the chair.
"The magnates handed Ken the crown and raised a mighty cheer.
"But they raised Ban Johnson's salary 10,000 bucks a year."

Mrs. Mallory Is Tennis Winner

New York, Feb. 1 (A.P.).—Mrs. Molla Mallory, former national champion, began her 1926 indoor tennis campaign today by defeating Mrs. Edward Raymond of Scarsdale, N. Y., 6—2, 6—1, in the second round of the Heights Casino invitation women's tournament. Both had drawn first round byes.

HOFF SAYS HE WILL COMPETE IN B. A. A. MEET

LEAVES FOR NEW YORK TONIGHT

Recently Unofficially Broke His Indoor Pole Vault Record at Hanover

By STED CHANDLER

Charles H. ff Norway's all-around athletic star, will compete in the Boston Athletic Association games in the Arena Saturday night. He informed the Boston Evening American's Dartmouth correspondent at Hanover today.

Sted Chandler.

Hoff leaves tonight for New York, where he is entered in the 1000 yard run and the 440 at the all-star A. C. games. He will also enter all the events at the B. A. A. games on Saturday, Feb. 13, and the New England Turn games the 14th with a possibility of his entering at the other New York meet later that date.

He is contemplating a Western tour during May, although his plans are not as yet definite in between the dates of the games mentioned Hoff will return to Hanover for further training under Harry Hillman.

Hoff is in fine physical and mental condition, and recently unofficially broke his indoor world's pole vault record, during a trial in the Dartmouth gymnasium.

Although the Hunter Mile has long been a feature of the Boston Athletic Association games, for the past few years much competitive interest has been taken from it by the consistent supremacy of the perennial Joie Ray.

Joie has always stepped way out in front and left the competition to the rest of the field. This year, however, things will be different, and the B. A. A. Hunter Mile should be one of the finest races, in a competitive sense, on the program.

As much as Boston fans like to see Ray run, his absence in no way detracts from the interest in this event. The field which Tom Kanaly has signed up is a galaxy of headline stars, not one of whom is considered a Chinaman's chance of a walkaway.

Leo Larrivee, running for the Illinois A. C., is one of the strongest contenders on the list, and his performances thus far this season prove that it is going to take fast and furious stepping to outdistance him.

He will be opposed, however, by Willie Goodwin, Schuyler Enck, Walter Baldwin, the B. A. A. entry, Egan, Ed Kirby of the Newark A. C. and Bill Dooley.

The Arena will also be the scene of some sensational sprinting. Jules Ouaert Hoiben, of course, will be back in Boston to compete. Then there will be three of the four members of the United States relay team at the 1924 Olympic games. These fliers are Frank Hussey of Boston College, Louis Clarke of Johns Hopkins and Al Leconey of Lafayette.

The relays promise also to be red letter events. More than a dozen of these team races are now on the card, the latest addition being the University of Maryland, which was so anxious to participate that she is paying the expenses for her team. Director Kanaly has matched Maryland with Bowdoin.

The relays include four triangular events. Harvard, M. I. T. and Princeton are carded for one, with Colby, Boston University and Tufts in another. The University of Pennsylvania will send a team to race Brown and Dartmouth, and New Hampshire, M. A. C. and Maine will step to the same mark together.

Johnny Gibson, new Fordham star, who won the 600-yards here at the Newark games last Wednesday, much to the surprise of the athletic world, has entered the Keith 660.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER B. HORTON

Having detailed, in articles immediately preceding, the full upright and the flat swings, so that players might at the start of the year select one definite swing, let us look now into the merits of the medium upright swing. Undoubtedly there are many of you who should adopt this swing as a fixed part of your golf and never leave off with it. The medium upright swing is an abbreviated full upright, and it falls just between the full upright and the flat swing. In using it the arms do not go so high in the back swing, the pivot is somewhat shorter and the ball takes less yardage, though it takes plenty for the average player. For this swing you begin with the square stance, as sketched.

Many Features on Week's Boxing Bill

By RINGSIDE

The real he-fellows will have plenty of alibis this week to hand out why they can't stay home at the fireside or take their girl to the movies. For every night but Wednesday we can book the sport fans to some one place or another and give them a real kick.

The ring game is at its height just at present and in the offering we have the big Suffolk A. A. show which is to be held at Mechanics Building on Thursday night, featuring the great European ring performer, Tommy Milligan of Scotland and Pete Lazo of Scranton, Pa., in the main bout of ten rounds.

Matchmaker Tommy Goodwin has this attraction well balanced, offering to the ring fans in the semi-final bout of eight rounds Wee Willie Woods of Scotland and the brilliant young Johnny Vacca of Brighton. These two battlers met a couple of months ago and Vacca was awarded a close-up on the Scottish ringster.

Then there are to be two other bouts of eight rounds duration. One will introduce into the professional bill circles Ray Cross of Milford, the former amateur 115-pound champion, and Dave Powers of Dorchester. The other, a heavyweight classic, will show Archie Skinner of Scotland and Jimmy Madden of Roxbury.

Pete Bianchi of Clifton, another former amateur knight of the padded ring, will entertain Eddie Davis of the South End in the four-round opening show of the evening.

Boxing Chatter

Tonight is the night that Tommy Robson of Malden steps through the ropes at Prof. Pale. N. Y., to meet Jim Slattery of that city. Slattery needs no introduction here and neither does our good friend and scrapper, Robson. The latter was always a favorite with the Hotte fans.

Sid Terris of the East Side of New York city and Luke Kary will be the semi-final contestants in the Stadium City.

A large gathering of friends and admirers of Red Chapman will push away the groceries tonight at the dinner which is being tendered the Chelsea-Dorchester fighter at the Boston Yacht Club Station, India & Lewis Wharf.

The Boston Lodge of Elks is touring in a special intercity heavyweight class between boys of New York, Pittsburgh and Boston on Friday night at the Arena. George Freeman claims that it will be one of the best shows pure boxers of the season.

Matchmaker Tommy Goodwin of the Suffolk Club is preparing to mould together a basketball team has added two new names to the schedule. Hamilton will play Wesleyan here February 23, and Haverford will play here February 13.

Jack Sharkey-Pat McCarthy tussle of ten rounds as the feature attraction of a show to be announced in the near future. McCarthy, they relate say, is in fine shape just at present for a bout with the New England champion.

Babe Herman, who shows here on next Monday night as one of the principals in the Commercial Club show, is to be in Cleveland tonight. The California is pitted against Johnny Datto, with Willie Davies, Pennsylvania, and Willie LeMarie in the semi-final.

Penn to Play Cornell

New York, Feb. 1 (A.P.)—Only one game will be played in the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League this week, Pennsylvania and Cornell now tied with Princeton for third place, meeting at Ithaca, N. Y., Saturday night.

WESLEYAN FIVE ADDS TWO GAMES TO LIST

Middletown, Ct., Jan. 28.—Manager John J. Leland of the Wesleyan

EXPECT BILL BRODERICK TO SIGN AGAIN

Bill Broderick's contract at Salem High expires this month. The Witch City athletic director has made a big hit with the natives since the new stadium he planned was erected a few years ago. No doubt, Bill will sign his name on the dotted line again.

The schoolboy races at the Knights of Columbus track carnival were all very interesting. If "Jigger" Jones had another Hormel on his Worcester Academy track squad, they would have a real two lap relay team. "Hennie" is quite a boy in a track uniform.

Bob O'Keefe, Revere High basketball coach, is happy. The Beach City hoopsters finally won a game—but it took strategy and everything else that Mister O'Keefe had in his system to turn the tide. A revamped quintet, with Chick Lavan at centre trounced Peabody.

Another athlete who is making up for lost time is Capt. Bill Bailey of the English High hockey sextet. Bailey was forced to watch a few games from the sidelines owing to a slight injury. Since he rejoined his teammates the six is practically unbeatable.

ARE PUBLIC DANCE HALLS A MENACE?

Beatrice Fairfax on Girls Who Seek Thrills

By Beatrice Fairfax

Who Occupies a Unique Position in the Writing World as an Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage

"Is it advisable to go to public dance halls unchaperoned?" asks Perplexed.

The same question is puzzling many thousands of girls who are earning for good times, yet do not wish to cheapen themselves.

What do you think?

What has your experience been?

If you have found a way of meeting congenial young people, of dancing among pleasant surroundings without incurring the risk and questionable status involved in going unchaperoned to public dance halls, please write and tell your story. In this way you may help countless other girls who are facing the same problem.

"Dear Miss Fairfax," writes "Perplexed":

"Just what opinion have young men of girls who go to public dance halls unchaperoned?

"I have discussed that question over and over again with my girl friends. They all go to these dances and they always tell me of the wonderful times they have and the nice young men they meet. In fact, this is the only way some of these girls can meet any boy friends.

"I have never attended a public dance. I am crazy about dancing, but I cannot bring myself to enter one of these places where any stranger men can come over and ask for a dance. It would make me feel so cheap.

"I have just as many boy friends as other girls. I am modern and sociable and differ from these girls only in not going to public dances.

My friends tell me that I am missing many good times by not going, but I think I would rather stay home all alone than associate with some of those dance hall cake eaters.

"Won't you give me some advice? Who, in your opinion, is right, my friend or I?

"PERPLEXED."

In your problem, as in most problems, Perplexed, there is something to be said for each side of the question. To sweepingly condemn all public dance halls would be foolish. There are some excellently managed halls where young people can feel quite free from danger and from cheapening influences while they enjoy the rhythm of their favorite jazz to their hearts' content. There are cities, such as Louisville, Kentucky, where the dance halls are managed perfectly by municipal supervision

In most of our big cities neighborhood settlements conduct public dance halls that are models and which are crowded nightly with appreciative dancers. Now and then a dance hall in connection with a public park or recreation ground is well managed and free from menace. But the average public dance hall even of the better class, contains elements of danger. Public dances are often attended by the worst class of people—by men who, seemingly resentful to the girls present, dance unchaperoned. They may go to these dances for the express purpose of luring young girls into traps cleverly set, to bring about their downfall. The cutting-in system, by which every girl must dance with everyone who asks her is especially objectionable.

Doubtless many girls of undoubted character attend public dances unchaperoned. They may even do so and escape the dangers that lurk in such places, but too often a menace does exist. So, if you do go, why not take a chaperon?

Under these circumstances you are wise indeed, Perplexed, in refusing to go to places where you are likely to meet objectionable people and may run into actual danger.

Why not join a dancing class conducted by a teacher of unquestionable character?

Why not attend the socialies so many of our churches give where dancing is encouraged under wholesome conditions?

Why not get up a small club of your own, consisting of four or five couples, and meet for informal dancing at various homes?

I am certain that some of the suggestions I've just made, or a still better plan, which your own ingenuity may suggest, will provide you all the dancing your heart desires under conditions that are safe as well as congenial. AND I assure that the kind of young man you would wish for a friend, sweetheart or husband will think more of you because you have held your standard very high and have risked cheapening yourself by going unchaperoned to a public dance hall.

LONGS TO MEET RIGHT MAN. MANY GO TO DANCE HALLS. BUT DANGER LURKS THERE. WHY NOT DANCE AT HOME?

The Right Way to Meet the Right Man

The Making of a Husband, a Serial of Married Life and Its Problems, by Ann Lisle

By Ann Lisle

"No man is." Jim objected. "He feels like a waster—a loafer."

"I wonder if it's that," I said. "Or if an active man feels plain bored when he finds himself sitting around the house doing nothing day after day. But when a man is hanging around the house, generally his wife is there a lot of the time, too. While in this case——"

I hesitated. I wanted to go on being right where we are. I like the Birches. I am deeply intrigued by the Tarasov-Lingard mystery. And I had a feeling that my next words might well be turned against me. I fumbled around in my mind for some way to avoid what I had started to say. But Jim rounded me up with a quick:

"In this case—what, Anne? Do I neglect you? Do I still give you the impression of needing a lot of other things besides your society to fill my life?"

"You have to start off to town about 8 in the morning, and you don't get home until 7 in the evening," I said. "That means I'm up and about for almost twelve hours with about three hours' of household duties to occupy me. And the other eight hours may be as empty that they rattle, without implying the slightest criticism of you and your devotion."

"So you get yourself involved in this Tarasov-Lingard business," Jim said, more to himself than to me. "Satan certainly can find a lot of mischief for idle hands to do."

"How plainly can we speak?" I asked.

"Need you ask that?" Jim protested.

"Each one of us is blaming the other for something?" I said.

"Let's get the something out and accounted for. You are thinking I'm a restless, modern woman. You are feeling that I'm not a sweet, gracious wife. How much more you're accusing me of, I don't know yet."

"I'm not accusing you of anything," Jim growled.

"Let me defend myself," I said.

"Go to it," Jim answered, filling his pipe and showing every sign of returning amiability

"I've given up my business——"

"I wouldn't say that," Jim broke in. "You go to town once a week and keep your hand on the reins."

"Once a week?" I repeated. "What business can be actually 'run' by anyone who visits it once a week? I'm just a play-pretend superintendent of my own office, and I'm not fooling myself with any ideas to the contrary. Yes, I've given up business for you. You didn't force me to it in the old intolerant days when you almost made me choose. But your love and my devotion have an insidious effect. First, I give up Ralph Lacy's friendship. Then business went"

"Do you regret both so much?" Jim asked wearily

"I might not if I had something to take their place," I said. "But when a woman hasn't work or children——"

Jim got to his feet. His face was black.

"That's right!" he cried. "Nag a man until he is half mad!"

Then he rushed across the floor in a whirlwind of rage. As he slammed the door of his room I realized that quarrels are no longer an every-day thing with us. I wondered what a wind of fury such as had just swept Jim would do to our new-found understanding.

When I came out to breakfast on the morning after Tarasov's appearance and the ensuing quarrel with Jim, I found May Valleau waiting for me with a look of great concern on her face.

"Mister Harrison, he go," she said, with the painstaking air of having learned a set speech. "He have plan for the very important engagement in town. His way to tell you he make hard work and cannot be home for the dinner. He shall be home plenty time to lock up and look out for house. I say that good English?" she asked, smiling engagingly.

"Fine," I agreed, with my mind far more on Jim's attitude than on the words in which May had conveyed news of it to me

"Then I tell you what is my own worries," she said. "This morning when I go out get the water from the spring, where it is I like always we shall drink, I see fires over by edge of woods. I go for to have the look. There is Tarasov. He have make camp. He got little cook shack. I tell him he shall get out. He smiles without the teeths and tell me he is here he shall look out for you and that you have give him the permission. I not like that so much."

May shook her head thoughtfully. Her demeanor showed concern and a grave sense of being responsible for me and compelled to keep me from making wrong decisions.

"I told Tarasov he might stay here," I informed May quietly.

"Oh, but why?" she protested, with no thought of impertinence or of presuming. "Have I not told you how that I am afraid of him and that he shall see my little Arlette and covet her for that she so like the petit maman he love?"

"Arlette is a child," I said. "Tarasov is a middleaged man. His mind is filled with his Rosine—your 'petite maman.' He isn't thinking of someone to fill her place. He is thinking of Lingard, the man who spoke things for him. I believe that Tarasov is a good-natured giant and sane, except for his hatred of Lingard. But if Tarasov's mind is filled with the thought of protecting us from the Red Palmer, he will probably be as busy and as intent on things outside his own tragedy and fancied grievances that he will come back to full sanity. Don't you think he has a right to his chance, May?"

"I do not understand so good," May grumbled.

"I think about all these. I not like my Arlette shall take the chances."

"Aren't you a little morbid about Arlette?" I asked. "First you do nothing for fear she will grow too much attached to Nicholas Perry because he offers her a glimpse of all the luxury and beauty you think she craves. Now you are starting to borrow more trouble. You are worrying over Tarasov. Granted he is a menace, May, don't you think it is safer to have him right on the edge of our property where we can keep track of him than somewhere up on the side of the hills in the thick forests we can't penetrate."

"Maybe you have right," May said thoughtfully. "I go ask Fake Schmidt. He know. He know everything."

I was deeply amused at the girl's touching faith in Zeke. But I realized that if the emperor of the district didn't approve of Tarasov's camping out here in the neighborhood, I might find myself involved in a feud beside being the centre of the Red Palmer mystery.

Maria Jeritza Tells How a Woman's Hair May Be Made an Irresistible Lure

By Maria Jeritza

Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company and One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day

A WOMAN'S hair can be exquisitely beautiful—a lure as irresistible as the golden locks of the Lorelei. On the other hand it can be and too often is dull, drab and utterly unattractive.

Whether your hair adds to your charm or is repellent depends on the care you give it. Some of us are not blessed with regular features. A perfect figure may not be within the reach of all

Let's suppose your hair is dull and lifeless. Even your scalp feels dry and hot. Brushing brings a powdering of fine light dandruff to the surface. Before you can hope to have attractive hair this dandruff must be removed. For dandruff robs the roots of the scalp and prevents their healthy functioning.

There is not the slightest danger attached to washing a healthy scalp frequently. Shampoos do not remove the natural oil but increase it to normal, by improving the circulation of blood in the scalp. So if you have a great deal of dandruff or your hair is falling out, begin by giving yourself two or three shampoos each week. This number can gradually be decreased to one shampoo each week or ten days.

Tincture of green soap makes an excellent shampoo, although some specialists recommend in preference, mental castile soap, for a very dry scalp.

If you use green soap, dilute it with water in proportion of two parts to one. Apply the shampoo to your scalp with your finger tips. Rub it thoroughly into every part of your scalp and hair. Then add sufficient warm water to make a thick lather and go over your entire scalp systematically with the lather.

When your hair and scalp are cleansed, rinse out the soap. Then repeat the process a second time. It's the second lathering and rinsing that insures dainty cleanliness.

You may need many changes of water to get out all the soap-suds. A bath spray is a great help in this process. The most important thing about the shampoo is rinsing out every particle of soap.

Finally, dry your hair with hot towels. If you can dry it in the sunshine, massaging it as it dries, you will find sunshine the best hair tonic in the world.

Many women like to add the juice of a lemon to the final rinsing water. This softens the water and adds sheen to the hair.

Whether your hair is long or short, dark, blond or snowy white, you can make it, if you will, a leading characteristic of your beauty.

TAKE SALTS IF STOMACH ISN'T ACTING RIGHT

Says Jad Salts Stops Indigestion Caused by Hydrochloric Acid

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather ferments, the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that indigestion is caused by Hyperacidity, meaning there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Then everything eaten sours in the stomach, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest; we belch up gas; we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, waterbrash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink it while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief often follows the first dose, it is important to help neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver stimulate the kidneys and thus prepare a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used for many stomach disorders with excellent results.

Necessity of Change in a Child's Diet Explained by Dr. Reed

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President American Medical Association.

YOUR baby may not be doing well on its exclusively milk diet. This condition is often due to some defect in the quality of the milk or in the constitution of a normal child.

When it is due to the milk the matter is easily corrected by careful examination of the food, possibly by a change of supply, both to be done under the direction of your physician.

In cases in which the trouble arises from some peculiarity of either the digestive power or the nutritional demands of the baby, there is a strong probability of a demand for some other element of food.

As a rule, this additional demand is for that class of energy-producing foods known as proteins, which occur most abundantly, but not exclusively, in meats.

The notion has obtained that infants have not the power to digest proteins. This is true when the protein is given in its original meat form. The cells and fibres of meat carry an element called cellose, which has no nutritional value and which requires the acid normally present in the adult stomach to digest it.

If it is necessary to add protein to the milk diet, it is best done by the administration of the juices squeezed from the meat. The question as to whether or not protein in this form can be digested by the infant stomach has been very carefully investigated by Drs. Rosenbaum and Stiegel, two distinguished German scientists.

They began their studies by giving the protein in the form of meat juice to infants and then withdrawing the stomach contents one and a half hours after it had been swallowed. The material thus removed was at once filtered and analyzed as to the amount of nitrogen, or changed protein, present. The material was then kept for a number of hours at the body temperature. They found that the protein was digested when given in excess of the amount in which it occurs in human milk.

They found that the trouble with the earlier experiments was that the normal acid of the stomach is much less active in a laboratory jar than in the stomach itself."

It was by these methods that they found that the added protein was digested much more quickly than was that of the cow's milk, which frequently remained in the stomach for longer than four hours.

They concluded from this that in an infant diet which carried the high protein content, the necessary digestive change was carried on effectively.

This supervision is important because the presence of protein in large quantities in the food has a tendency to provoke putrefactive changes in certain conditions of the intestines. It requires professional supervision to determine whether these changes are present or absent.

When your child has Croup

IN cases of spasmodic croup or kiddies' colds, the child's suffering and your anxiety will find quick relief through the soothing, healing, medicated vapors of Vicks VapoRub.

When Vicks is rubbed over throat and chest at bedtime it acts in two ways at once—

(1) It is vaporized by the body heat and inhaled direct to the inflamed air passages and lungs, loosening the phlegm and easing the cough; and

(2) At the same time it warms and stimulates the skin like a poultice, "drawing out" the soreness and pain.

Colds are usually better by morning and croup is often relieved with one application.

Fads and Fancies

By Mildred Ash

TOLD—by a Tolling Bell—Dame Fashion hears of a new motif in millinery trimmings. A large, flat, appliqued bell appears, in a swinging position, upon the crown of one of the tiny French felt hats lately imported from Paris.

Loosely Woven—is the mesh forming the background of the latest version of Spanish shawl. All in one color, the pattern of flowers and leaves are more closely woven than the ground, thus standing out in repousse effect.

Expecting the Unexpected—should be the mental state of those who follow French fashions; but who could possibly have surmised that the creators of exclusive lingerie would trim the new spring models with metal lace? Another surprise lies in the use of printed chiffons and georgettes for entire garments as well as for trimmings on underthings of solid color.

The Spice of Variety—flavors the latest glove novelty, one cuff of the pair carries a row of rhinestones in bracelet effect. Of white glace kid, with small scallops and cuff bound in black kid, a narrow black band circles each wrist. In the right glove this band forms a background for the brilliant bracelet.

Misty Shades Not Amiss—Even in umbrella of peace intended more for sunshades than to protect from a sudden Southern shower, are shown in new frosted shades of rose, green and blue, and feature large pongee handles, to match, that are supposed to be used in sets.

powder puff from the dresser and climbed back into bed partially dressed.

She Hates Work

She yawned and stretched herself like a pet kitten on its cushion in a sunny window. "Oh, but it's marvellulous not to have to go to work!" she sighed. "I think I'll loaf around home for a month or so, before I get another job. You flip it from Flossie, this getting up business in the morning is the limit!"

Mary Rose laughed. "I can imagine you, along about the end of the first week, when it was time for you to get your pay envelope" she said. "You'd be wanting a new hat or a dress or a permanent wave—and where would the money come from?"

Flossie raised her [illegible] brows, that were so startling against the back-ground of white skin and raw gold hair: "Yea, there's something in that," she admitted. "I do need the money. But I sure hate the job!"

She drew her cigaret case from under her pillows and lolled back with a cigaret between her slim fingers.

Mary Rose looked at her, struck, as she often was, with her sister's amazing beauty.

In the shabby little bedroom, she bloomed like a priceless orchid. Her heart-shaped face, with its beautifully curved lips, with the wistful droop of her blue eyes over the sapphire eyes, was breath taking in its loveliness. No money in the world could have bought the splendid, exotic, vibrant beauty that had been given to little Flossie Middleton.

"And yet she doesn't know what to do with it," thought Mary Rose. "She makes herself cheap, by letting men flirt with her—or by flirting with them first."

The very thought of Flossie going into another office frightened Mary Rose. At Dexter's she had been able to keep her eye on her, at least some of the time.

Gives Up Job

"Flossie, why don't you get married to Sam?" she asked suddenly.

Flossie thoughtfully screwed out the light from her cigaret against the wallpaper at the side of the bed.

"That, my dear," she said deliberately, is none of your business."

The door of the room opened and Mrs. Middleton came in with the breakfast tray.

"Too tired to go to work after the party?" she asked, as she set it down on Flossie's bed. "I heard you come in, but I was too sleepy to get up. It must have been around two o'clock, though."

"It was," Flossie said, calmly biting into a roll.

"When I was a girl, young folks' parties were always over by twelve at the very latest," Mrs. Middleton went on. "And that was plenty late enough—"

She stopped short and began to sniff the air delicately with her nostrils. "Cigaret smoke!" she exclaimed, and put her nose down into Flossie's brigh hair. "You jus' reek of it, Flossie Middleton! That's from being around that good-for-nothing Sam Jessup! He always has one of the nasty things hanging out of his mouth."

"Yes, Mother, I know," Flossie said meekly, and winked at Mary Rose, who was putting on her hat. "He's just ruining his health with the nasty weed!"

"Oh, say, do something for me, Rosey," she called when her sister was halfway down the stairs. "Come here, and I'll tell you what it is!"

Mary Rose came back and stood in the doorway.

"Go and get my salary from the cashier at the office, will you?" she asked. "And bring it home with you. He often gives me my money ahead of time, you know"

Mary Rose got the money from Turner, the old cashier, late that afternoon

As she turned away from the cage, she bumped into a tall girl who had just come in.

"Oh, I'm sorry—" she began and stopped. For the tall girl was Doris Hinig, all in black broadcloth with a boquet of gardenias pinned on her breast, and the look that she gave Mary Rose was withering.

Doris' Scorn

"She needn't be jealous of me I'm sure," she said to herself a second later, as she went out into the autumn twilight and turned toward home.

For John Manners hardly noticed Mary Rose these days. He gave her dictation in a monotonous voice such as he might have used when speaking into a dictaphone. He looked at her in the impersonal way that he might have looked at a time clock.

It was hard for her to realize that there ever had been a time when he had called her "Mary Rose," and had told her that he loved her and always would love her. That time seemed like a dream dim and unreal

"Flossie always says that you can't believe what any man says when he's in love," she thought "And maybe Flossie's right."

Flossie was not at home when she walked into the kitchen of the little brown house at six o'clock

"She went out about an hour ago, without telling me where she was going," Mrs. Middleton said "I heard the front door slam and when I went to look out the window I saw her going down the street She was carrying something."

Mary Rose made no answer, and presently her mother spoke again "Did she tell you she'd quit her job at the office?" she asked, and the girl saw that there were lines of worry across her mother's broad low forehead. "My, I'm sorry she did that. I always thought she was so safe when she was there with you to look after her." She sighed deeply.

At seven Flossie had not come in, and the two women sat down to eat without her.

"I suppose she's somewhere with Sam Jessup," Mrs. Middleton decided, looking up at the clock. "He was here most of the afternoon, in stead of being at the office trying to earn his salary—I declare, I don't often dislike people, but I can't stand that Sam! He's so namby-pamby."

'Namby-pamby?" mused Mary Rose "He doesnt strike me that way."

Mrs. Middleton shook her head, impatiently

"Now, don't try to tell me anything about him, because I know all about him myself" she said with spirit. "He and Flossie were quarreling about something or other all afternoon. And you should have heard the way he let her talk to him! Why, he hasn't any more backbone than an oyster—"

"Come here, and I'll tell you what it is!"

Mother Weeps

"You think that about him because he's so meek when Flossie jumps on him," Mary Rose explained, laughing "But that's because he's in love with her. Sam's really a mighty smart young kid Everybody at the office says he's a comer"

Once more her mother shook her head. "You tan't tell me that anybody who dresses the way he does—with those trousers that trail on the ground and those awful ties is ever going to make his mark! Because I couldn't believe it!" she said, popping a mouthful of meat into her mouth, as if she were biting off Sam's unfortunate head. "If my girl married him, it's going to break my heart—"

To the surprise of Mary Rose she burst into tears.

"What's the matter, dearest?" the girl asked. "Surely you're not crying because Flossie's in love with Sam Jessup. She'll probably never marry him, anyway."

Mrs. Middleton sighed. "No-no," she said in a muffled tone, "I'm crying because I don't know anything about you and Flossie any more. You shut me out of your lives as if I were a stranger to you —I heard you both talking last night at two o'clock in here. And I knew something was going on—"

She got up from the table, pushed Mary Rose gently away from her and went out.

An hour afterward when the girl followed her the door of her mother's room was closed and locked.

"Poor little mother—" Mary Rose thought, and suddenly she saw the cruelty of Youth that goes its own way, pushing aside its props when it no longer needs them—leaving the shelter of the mother-bird's wings when it has tried its own and can fly away on them.

She went into her own room and turned on the lights.

It was then that she saw that something was wrong. For the room was in wild disorder. Flossie's clothes were scattered all over—and the side of the dresser where she kept her bottles and brushes and powder boxes was empty

Mary Rose pulled open the top drawer of the dresser. It was empty, too'

Flossie had gone! Bag and baggage! But where?

AMERICAN women have one weakness!

Style snobbery!

They will fall for any fashion so long as it comes from anywhere but home!

This snobbery started with Susie, a village belle, who would rather wear a mail order catalogue hat than anything the local milliner can create!

The girls in Omaha, Neb., think how many times have you seen a woman fall for the high hat and tall talk of a snobbish saleslady who sneers at the customer's bad taste if she doesn't like herself in the atrocious model they are trying to sell her!

One of the best dressed actresses I know confessed to me that her own sister designs and makes her clothes. But she doesn't dare tell anybody because they wouldn't appreciate it if they didn't think it's the height of chic to wear what they want and depend upon the reliable and economical home town store? Every town has designers and shops that can furnish just as smart and becoming things as can be furnished from afar if women would only have faith in them!

The shop that knows its customer and her personality and needs can outfit her a hundred times better and more honestly than the shop keeper that sells her what she wants to get rid of if she doesn't know her!

EVERYTHING about the room was cheerful but the people in it. Father, his hands in his pockets, faced his small son, Robert, who stood in the middle of the floor with his head down.

In a big chair sat mother; her eyes were red; she fumbled with a handkerchief and now and again she glanced up at her husband with a hopeless expression.

Father swallowed hard "And now, Bobbie," he said soemnly, "why did you steal those skates?"

Bobbie shuffled—clenched his hands, looked up bewildered—"I don't know," he faltered.

"Don't know?" thundered father, "haven't we brought you up to know better than that—a thief—Now see here, young man—"

Then mother rose—"Now, Henry, don't do anything rash—let me talk to Him—"

"Bobbie," said mother in a voice as tremulous as father's had been thunderous, "don't you know it's wicked to steal—Oh to think that a boy of mine should do such a thing —you've disgraced us—Oh why did you do it?"

Mother bursts into tears—Bobbie stares frightened from one to another and wonders how he can escape.

Terrible, wasn't it, to take a pair of skates from the school dressing room—skates belonging to another —inexplainable in a boys brought up in a Christian household!

Home-Made, but Ends Coughs In a Hurry

A family supply of dependable cough medicine. Easily made and saves about $2

If you have a severe cough or chest cold, soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up at night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use strained molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes a pint of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief. You can feel this take hold of a cough instantly. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle, and soothes and heals the irritated membranes of the throat and bronchial tubes with such ease and promptness that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

PINEX for Coughs

On Her Engagement

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am planning on announcing my engagement soon, and wish to ascertain the correct form of making the announcement outside of the family.

(2) Is it still incorrect form to send out engraved cards?

(3) I have heard that it is customary for the bride-elect to present her fiance with an engagement present. Will you please inform me if this is correct.

Thank you for your kindness and courtesy. H.

THE most charming way to announce your engagement to your friends is to write them personal little notes containing the happy news. And nothing is in any good taste and in such good form as this informal method.

The best method of announcing an engagement is to announce it with regard to "degrees" of closeness of relationship and friendship. That is, a girl goes to see her close relations and very old friends of the family and tells them the news.

Her closest friends she naturally sees and tells, too. Then to the friends who are in the next "layer" of closeness in friendship she writes notes, short ones but most friendly in the spirit of "I want you to know the news one of the first." By this time she has told the ones who are most interested, and told them in a friendly, intimate way that does honor to their friendship and respects all the laws of natural courtesy

The rest of the world—the world that does not count so intimately to her but still the world that she wishes to inform—she informs by means of having a formal insertion in the newspapers. Her mother sends this item to the newspapers and the announcement is made by the mother and father. It reads something Like this

"Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Bush announce the engagement of their daughter, Rose, to Mr. William Brooks. Mr. Brooks is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Loring Brooks, of No. 2 Home avenue, Cleveland."

It never has been the correct form to send out engraved cards, dear H. And it is not now good form to send engraved cards for such an announcement.

While it is not exactly customary for a fiancee to give her fiance an engagement present, it is perfectly good form for her to do so. The fact that there is an engagement means that she has the right to give him any kind of presents that she may not give to her betrothed before the engagement.

(You are very welcome. "Come again," pease.)

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Should the lady be presented to the gentleman, or vice versa?

(2) should they extend their hands?

(3) If sitting, should the lady rise if presented to a lady or gentleman?

AN INTERESTED WRITER.

THE gentleman is introduced to the lady.

(2) There is no definite rule about shaking hands. The tendency nowadays is for people not to shake hands when they are introduced, unless there is some especial reason for doing so. For instance, when a friend whom you know very well is introducing a friend of whom he or she has spoken to you many times, then it would be natural and appropriate for you to indicate an especial pleasure in the introduction by making a special gesture of enthusiasm. This can be done with a handshake.

But for the ordinary, casual introduction it is not necessary or expected that one shake hands.

The lady is the one who offers the hand first, if there is to be a handshake. The gentleman waits for her to offer her hand.

(3) The lady does not rise when a gentleman is presented to her. She usually rises when a lady is introduced

Now a Way to Give Dull Teeth High Polish

Dental authorities urge this new way

Please accept full 10-day tube free. Note the coral firmness of your gums, the great difference in the color of your teeth as dingy film coat is cleared from them.

DENTAL science now says, and thousands of people have learned, that teeth seldom are naturally off color and dull. Cloudy teeth now are restored to sparkling clearness. Tender gums firmed to healthy coral tint.

A new way has been found. One's whole appearance thus is often changed. Clear teeth make a tremendous difference in your smile. Foremost dentists urge this method. Scores of movies' $100,000 a year smiles are made to glisten so alluringly in this simple way.

May we send you a full 10-day tube to try? Your teeth, you'll find, are not permanently off color . . . simply clouded with a dingy film coat ordinary dentifrices have failed to clear off successfully.

What film is—Dulls teeth, invites gum disorders

Dental science now traces scores of tooth and gum troubles to a germ-laden film that forms on teeth.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel it—a slippery, viscous coating.

That film absorbs discolorations from food, smoking, etc. And that is why your teeth look "off color" and dingy—dull and unattractive.

It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It lays your gums open to bacterial attack. Germs by the millions breed in it. And they, with tartar, are a chief cause of pyorrhea and decay.

Old ways won't clear it off

Ordinary dentifrices and cleansing won't fight film successfully. Feel for it now with your tongue. Note how your present cleansing method is failing in its duty.

Now new methods are being used. A dentifrice called Pepsodent—different in formula, action and effect from any other known.

Largely on dental advice, the world has turned to this method.

Clears film off Firms the Gums

It accomplishes two important things at once! Removes that film, thus firms the gums.

A few days' use will prove its power beyond all doubt.

Send the coupon. Clip it now before you forget.

DAILY SHORT STORY

GOLDEN DAFFODILS

By Lillian M. Mitchell

JUST why Jim Mason and Ed Winters were such close friends was one of those inexplicable combinations which neither they nor anyone else understood. Jim Mason was wealthy, had been graduated from one of the finest universities in the country and now drove downtown each morning in his low-swung roadster. Ed Winters, like his name, had had a wintry time of it; he had earned his way through high school by hard work, had attended a State university, where he did anything and everything to earn his expenses.

And yet of all of the men in the offices, these two chose to chum together in affirmation, to eat lunch-son together at the little stand-up counter downstairs in the lobby, to argue hotly about welterweights and heavyweights and discuss amiably the relative values of experience against a university education.

Greeted All Comers

And with all of this, Jim Mason had no way of guessing that Ed Winters' university education was to do him, Jim, any particular good.

Jim, having plenty of money himself, cared nothing about marrying money, and Ed, having none himself, realized that it would be a sorry outlook for his happiness should he fall in love inadvertently with a wealthy girl. Perhaps this was the reason that they both looked with eager eyes on Eileen Thompson who, backed by a college education and a voice with a smile, greeted all comers in the offices.

Now Eileen was the first object of agreement. They both agreed that blue eyes and red-gold hair was a stunning combination. They agreed that it was fortunate that her salary was sufficient to buy the good-looking clothes she wore. Once in a while they took flowers for her desk. It was the day that Jim took golden daffodils and Ed Winters bought pink carnations that Ed understood Eileen's feelings for the first time. Wincing he saw her put his carnations on the far edge of the desk, while the golden daffodils were kept close at hand beside the blue-bordered handkerchief with its tiny hand-monogramed corner.

It was on that very day too, that Myra Hartwell went into the personnel department. Myra, her full brown eyes looking out the people already working in the firm, regarded both Ed and Jim thoughtfully. In the records of the personnel department, she saw that Ed had been graduated from the university in which one had held her first office position. She remarked about it to him the first time that the chance presented itself.

Smiled Brightly.

He nodded: "Yes," he said quietly, "I know."

And Myra nodded, too, and smiled at him brightly. In her mind was the thought that her fame and brilliance had spread farther than even she had hoped.

Jim laughed about it jovially "If you'd only be decent now and fall in love with this Myra instead of Eileen," he said teasingly to Ed what a merry life we'd have. We could both get married and live in adjoining fold-upe, come to the office together every day and golf Saturday afternoons like all nice married people."

"Yes—and let you have Eileen," said Ed laughingly.

But with all of the joking and teasing, Ed could not forget the golden daffodils so close to her and the carnations pushed away so far.

Owing to expansion and stock taking, it was necessary several evenings to work overtime and on these occasions it seemed but natural that the four dine together in the little cafe across the street. And sometimes Ed walked with Eileen and sometimes with Myra. If he stared speculatively at Myra now and again she was entirely unaware of it.

Then one day while Ed Winters was up on the top floor of the building he heard the fire gong. He had been with the firm long enough now to know that fire drills were frequent and of course unexpected. For newcomers he believed them to be fine things even though smacking slightly of the elementary schools. This day, being anxious to turn out a great volume of reports while upstairs, he decided not to go down to the drill. Instead he kept running over records and filen, listening now and again with a grin as he heard [illegible] that new girls always let out during fire drills.

Myra Fainted.

Then the electric lift door opened with an easy motion and in the door he saw Eileen's face.

"Come," she said, pushing back her hair with a sooty hand. "It's—it's real—this time. I knew you'd think it was—just—drill—but, Ed—it's—oh—" and to his astonishment Eileen fell forward into his arms.

It seemed as though the electric elevator would never descend! The smoke was becoming thicker and thicker.

"Eileen," he murmured when she was opening her eyes again, "did Jim—Jim—?"

"He had to carry Myra out," answered Eileen, her lips form. "She fainted—"

And then as they reached the outer air, Ed saw Jim holding Myra carefully. He was bending over her now and Ed could not but be pleased at the expression on Jim's face for if Jim married Myra—ah! what opportunities would there not be with Eileen for him.

"Self-preservation," thought Ed to himself.

But before his eyes came the picture of his years at the university and with grim lips he determined to tell Jim something. "You know, Jim," said Ed later, "when I was at the university I did a bit of janitoring. I worked in the offices at night until twelve. Well, one girl's desk was always surrounded by scraps of paper. They were never anything of any secret nature—it was just a case of tearing paper absent-minded-ly into small bits and casting them towards, but not in the waste basket.

Both Laughed

"Now if you'd ever janitored, you'd know that bits of paper like that have to be picked up, one by one while splinters got under your nails and while your superior yells at you to hustle the thing through. I left a note for this girl one night suggesting that she drop papers uptorn into the basket. The thing continued. Then the night before I was graduated I left a note again and said, 'This is the last time I shall mention the matter! Don't leave scraps of paper on the floor!'"

They both laughed and then Ed went on.

"You see, a girl might be careless but this one was evidently inconsiderate as well, and if you married Myra you might find that to live with an inconsiderate girl was—of course, the girl was Myra—" he ended. "You knew the girl was Myra?" he asked.

Jim nodded carelessly: "Yes, a good scout, Ed. But Myra is engaged to someone else. It was just—well, as long as Eileen was as she did—I asked Myra a month ago and she—refused me. It seems she likes—you."

Gave Him Hope.

"Set your golden daffodils—" began Ed bewildered

Jim shrugged. "I know—that's what gave me hope. But who can understand a woman? Maybe she liked the color; maybe the color blended with her hair—a thousand things. But Eileen told me she—you—"

Ed was staring about the disordered street now almost empty. "I wonder—perhaps I can get hold of some golden daffodils," he said "I—I'd like mighty well to—thanks, Jim, old man, I—you [illegible]erstand—"

And Jim was left alone in the street while his friend leaped toward a shop marked; FLORIST.

THE FOXY GRANDPA DAILY BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

WE were in St. Paul's Cathedral in London and there we saw the tomb of the great Lord Nelson, England's greatest admiral. And by the way do you know that the black ties which all the sailors wear started as a mark of mourning for this brave man and are worn by all bluejackets today as perpetual mourning for one of the most gallant sailors of all time?

Bobby stopped by another tomb and read the inscription:

"If you would behold his monument, look around you."

"What does that mean, Foxy Grandpa?" asked the boy, wrinkling up his little forehead.

"It means that there lies the man who built this beautiful church."

"Sir Christopher Wren," read Bobby. "Tell me about him, Foxy Grandpa."

We left the church and as we walked along the street I told Bobby all I could remember about the great builder and architect.

"Sir Christopher Wren was a very brilliant young man," I commenced, "and when he was only about twenty-five years old he was professor of mathematics and astronomy at Oxford and then later he was made Surveyor of Public Works—that is to know about and attend to public buildings.

"Now as it happened there was a St. Paul's Cathedral before this one, built way back in Saxon times, and strangely it was set on fire four times—three of the times the fire starting from its being struck by lightning."

"Whew!" said Bobby. "Think of that."

"Now in 1666, this building was sadly in need of repair, and Sir Christopher Wren was called upon to plan for its rebuilding and to carry out the work.

"This he was prevented from doing because that year a great plague broke out in London, when thousands and thousands of people died. Three times this plague had swept the city in several years because it was so dirty and filthy and there were no sewers.

"It seems a strange thing to say, but in 1666 there occurred a great fire which proved a blessing. Again thousands perished in that awful fire, which at one time was two miles long and one mile wide."

"Why was it a blessing, Foxy Grandpa? How could it be?" asked Bobby.

"Because it cleaned out all the filth and disease and people built better houses. And so it was Sir Christopher Wren who was called upon to make plans for a new London.

"All of his plans were not carried out, but it was then that he commenced building the beautiful St. Paul's which you have just seen. And he also built the towers of Westminster Abbey.

"Building must have been difficult in those days without cranes and steam shovels," said Bobby.

"It was indeed," I said. "And nobody worked harder than Sir Christopher. Once a week he was lifted up to the top of the Cathedral in a basket by a rope to see how the work was going on, and there he worked for thirty-five years, until the fine church was finished.

"He must have made an awful lot of money," suggested the practical little Bobby.

Commenting on Federal Reserve policies, the Harvard Economic Service says:

"The United States holds a disproportionate amount (about one-half) of the world's stock of monetary gold. The possession of this gold stock cannot be safely regarded as a permanent condition upon which to base banking policy, since its accumulation was the result of exceptional circumstances due to war.

"At any time reallocation of the world's gold stock may involve the outflow of substantial amounts from this country. Clearly this contingency must be considered by the reserve authorities, even before such an outflow occurs.

"We believe, therefore, that credit expansion will be questioned whenever it threatens to reduce the reserve ratio below 60 per cent."

Pushing Us In

Billions in the Bond Business

The President asks Congress for $50,000 for preliminary expenses in connection with the Arms Conference to be held at Geneva. He will get the appropriation, of course. The people want him to have what he wants.

How pleasant it would be if our contributions to European entanglements could cost us only $50,000, or $50,000,000. The bill will be bigger than that, alas.

"WHY do you say that international finance pushes this country into the League of Nations, via the World Court," asks a dissenter.

Because international finance has sent its billions to Europe, and would like Uncle Sam to mix in and guarantee, or at least protect, the more or less foolish investments.

Look at your Wall Street reports. This nation in the past year has sent to Europe TWO BILLIONS, THREE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-ONE MILLIONS OF DOLLARS, MAKING A GRAND TOTAL OF ELEVEN AND A HALF BILLIONS SENT ABROAD BY PRIVATE INVESTORS. And that does NOT include the billions owing Uncle Sam by foreign nations.

How much of all that money will ever be repaid, no one knows. It may soon be "good business" for Europe to repudiate. This is certain, protecting those foreign investments may cost this country much more than the whole thing amounts to.

Bankers with the intelligence of financial chipmunks bought Russian bonds, and have been able to keep this nation at loggerheads with Russia ever since. What will happen if our billions, recklessly invested abroad, never come back?

Here They Are, How Do You Like Them?

Frankly, We Don't Like Them, AT ALL

Behold, the modern young woman—two of her! This is no nightmare, but an actual picture of young British females. How do you like it?

Looking at their heads only, you would say, "There are two boys, rather dull looking." But no, this is the "latest" in young, modern British females, smoking "fags," which means cigarettes, exchanging lights, hair carved with the "Eton" crop, bare arms, unreliable skirts.

This, if you please, is called "The Modern Miss, charming creature of 1926."

These long sylphs may appeal to the boy with the baggy Oxford trousers and the "nobody home" brain.

But, so far as we are concerned, anybody that wants these can HAVE them. They are printed here to give our friends a warning, showing a humanity that is NOT flesh, fish nor fowl.

Haverhill

Feeling Very Much Better, Thank You

Further evidence that the great shoe industry of Massachusetts has turned the corner and is on the way back to prosperity is furnished by a study of the pay-envelopes of Haverhill, and what is going into them.

In the week which ended on January 11, the payrolls of Haverhill factories showed an increase of approximately $45,000.

Again, in the week which ended on January 25, there was a FURTHER increase, this time of about $35,000.

A jump of $80,000, IN TWO WEEKS, means that Mr. Shoe, if he is not as spry as he used to be, is at least able to eat up and take his gruel.

A courageous city, Haverhill, rich with the spirit of "never-say-die." If better times have indeed returned to her, the rest of the Commonwealth will join in the hope that, as the theatrical journals say, the engagement may be "indefinite."

THINGS LEFT OUT OF SCHOOL COURSE

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

THERE is one strong indictment which I have to make against the results of our educational system.

The schools, while, upon the whole, teaching the majority of their pupils to speak, read and write our language at least decently well, and to do all the sums in arithmetic that the ordinary needs of life call for, fall very short of giving them even an elementary knowledge or conception of the great primary facts and laws of nature and of the universe in which their lot is cast.

An exhibit in this indictment may be found in a letter from San Prairie, Wis., written in a clear hand in faultless English, to which the following statements constitute a reply.

The Reply.

1—No, the earth's orbit is not a perfect circle.

2—The earth is farthest away from the sun in July—the date of nearest approach this year (there is a slight change from year to year) being July 5th, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, Greenwich time. Greenwich is five hours ahead of Eastern standard time and six hours ahead of Central standard time.

3—The earth is nearest to the sun in January—the date this year being January 2nd, at 4 a. m., Greenwich time.

4—The distance between the earth and the sun is variable (because the orbit is an ellipse and not a circle). Because of this variability astronomers base their calculations on the mean distance, which is, as near as it can be figured at present, 92,897,416 statute miles, or 149,504,201 kilometers. The distance on January 2 was 91,340,000 miles. On July 5 it will be 94,430,000 miles. Thus we are 3,090,000 miles nearer in January than in July.

5—The earth's axis (there is but one axis) does not change its direction with reference to outer space, but it has been found that there is a "wabbling" of the earth, which produces a very slight, continual shifting of the position of the axis inside the globe. This can only be detected by the most refined observations on the stars. The mathematical point of the North Pole turns yearly around a mean position taken as centre and from which it never departs more than about 30 feet measured on the earth's surface.

The surprise which many persons express when told that the earth is nearer the sun in Winter than in Summer is diminished when they are also informed that this statement applies only to the Northern Hemisphere. South of the equator Summer occurs when it is Winter on our side, and Winter there when it is Summer here. Consequently in South America, South Africa, Australia and other countries south of the equator it is Winter in July and Summer in January, so that they have their hot days when the earth is nearest the sun and their cold days when it is farthest from the sun.

At High Angle.

It seems like a contradiction in ... are that the same thing does not occur in our hemisphere; but the explanation is easy. The axis of the earth, which, I have just said, remains pointing in the same direction in space at all times of the year, happens to be so directed that as the earth goes around the sun the north pole of the axis leans toward the sun in July and away from the sun in January.

This causes the sun's rays to fall upon our hemisphere at a high angle in July (and the neighboring months) and at a low angle in January (and the neighboring months). And this difference in the angle of incidence of the sun's rays has far more effect upon the temperature than does the actual change of distance from the sun.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "LOOKING AHEAD"

SOME girls think if
They are BEAUTIFUL
They do not NEED
To be either WITTY
Or WISE.
Some women THINK
If they DEVELOP Their MINDS and
Are "intellectual,"
THEY have no need of Either CHARM or GRACE.
IF a girl WANTS
A RICH man
For a HUSBAND,
Her BEAUTY may get Her ONE. "Finding,"
They say, "is KEEPING,"

But there is no PROVERB
RASH enough to assert
That we CAN keep
ALL we get.
If an "INTELLECTUAL" merely Wants COMMENDATION from
Other women, she may
Not need CHARM, but if
She should be HUMAN enough
To WANT to be LOVED,
She MUST have GRACE.
LIFE is a long journey for
Which many women
Utterly FAIL
To EQUIP THEMSELVES properly.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

By Elsie Robinson

WE'VE lost the art of making homes. Never were American shops so crammed with household furnishings as at present. And never was the average home so devoid of personality and appeal.

The average American woman will choose a simple gown with slight ornament for her own apparel. But she'll dress up her walls until they look like a combination salad. Why?

Keep the floors as simple as the walls. Choose an inexpensive rug of two-toned coloring or unobtrusive pattern which harmonize with the wall. An imitation Chinese rug usually does not suit the average small home. Chinese rugs are designed for heavy, rich furniture and elaborate hangings.

Now comes the furniture.

Some place to lounge and "put your feet up" is essential if you would make a home with drawing power. Get a couch—a simple spring and mattress mounted on legs and covered with a denim spread is splendid. Put it next the wall.

Next get a few inexpensive wicker chairs. "Grass furniture" is much cheaper than real wicker, good to look at and very durable. Such chairs can be bought for about $3, sometimes even cheaper.

Don't have a chair in the room that doesn't allow you to thoroughly relax. Narrow, hard straight chairs are in abomination in any living room.

Last of all comes the table. A plain, wooden kitchen table, cut down slightly, stained or painted some soft, dull color, and provided with an interesting runner, is infinitely better than an imitation wal nut Jacobean Jimcrack that can't be scuffed and has no relationship to the rest of the room.

For curtains, plain scrim or theatrical gauze—a neutral tinted linen scrim—are in good taste.

Do not have anything in your house that doesn't mean something to you and doesn't express your own personality.

Build your room so that your family life can take root there and then only will you have started a home.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By Helen Rowland

WHAT is this in my Beloved's eye that causeth it to glow as brightly as a California sunrise?

Helen Rowland

Yea, what is THIS in my Beloved's eye that maketh it to shine with vanity when he catcheth sight of his image in the slot machine mirror?

What is this in my Beloved's eye that causeth it to sparkle with delight when he examineth his golf-clubs and appraiseth the weather?

What is this in my Beloved's eye that maketh it to glitter with covetousness, when he gazeth upon the rainbow-hued temptation of the haberdasher's window and with longing upon scarlet neckties and purple socks?

What is this in my Beloved's eye that causeth him to linger upon street corners, where he may behold the feminine parade pass by and to appraise every damsel as a jury in a beauty contest?

Behold, it is that "SATURDAY-AFTERNOON LOOK!"

And who shall mistake it?

For verily, verily, upon five days of the week a man doeth his labors and gazeth soberly out upon the world, seeing naught therein to delight him. But upon the Sixth Day, he fareth forth in search of diversion and adventure.

Yea, he is as a schoolboy that playeth hookey and goeth fishing.

And all the world looketh GOOD to him!

For this is Father's Day-Off!

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

MANICURISTS in a large Western town have formed an association and are going to charge a flat rate of ten cents a finger.

THUMBS will be two for a quarter.

THIS will save the men a lot of money because a man can have one hand manicured and keep the other one in his pocket.

BUT the girls are also going to make a charge of seventy-five cents an hour for listening to your troubles.

OF course, you can cheat them out of this extra money by keeping your mouth shut.

ACCORDING to manicurists, half the wives in the United States are invalids and the other half don't understand their husbands.

BUT since hair bobbing is the style, thousands of these invalid wives are coming into the barber shops themselves.

THIS flat rate should be a great help to busy men. A man who's in a hurry can now have one nail done at a time.

HE can pay her for both hands at once and have seven fingers coming.

SHE'LL owe him nine cuticles and two thumbs.

PRAYER FOR A WIDER HORIZON

By DR. FRANK CRANE

O LORD, open thou mine eyes.

Cure my blindness, that I may see past the tall buildings of cities and perceive the souls thereof, past the dark material into the luminous spiritual, past the hard things visible unto the fluid, eternal things invisible.

All about me are the barriers that cut off men's view of the wide vistas. Make mine eyes to have X-ray power to pierce through, and to be like telescopes to see afar.

Let me see beyond appetite to the pleasure of self-control.

Let me see beyond greed to the luxury of giving.

Past gold to the treasures of contentment.

Widen my horizon. Give me largeness of heart.

Let me not love the one woman less, but through her the welfare of all women.

All around and about my own children stand innumerable children everywhere; may my vision reach them, that I may strive to live for them also.

Let me see past revenge unto the strength and wisdom of forgiveness.

Let me see past blinding pride to sunny healthfulness of humility.

Let me see past profit to usefulness.

Past success to self-approval;

Past passion to poise;

Past the heat of desire to the light of renunciation;

Past the glare of power to the abiding beauty of service.

Past the rank, poisonous growth of self to the fragrance and flowers of unself.

Take my life out of the narrow pit and set me upon a high mountain.

I want to see, to see, and not forever to be a prisoner of prejudice, a bat of blind custom, a mote of ignorance, a convict in the penitentiary of fear, a frightened rate in the house of superstition.

Let me see past party to patriotism;

Past patriotism to humanity.

Let me see past the night to the renewing dawn;

Past gloom to glory, past death to eternal life, past the finite to the infinite;

Past men and things and events to God.

HOW DO YOU RECEIVE YOUR CRITICISMS?

Instead of listening and trying to gain something from harsh criticism concerning yourself or your actions, do you always become argumentative?

Your first thought is to justify yourself, isn't it?

The fact that you saw fit to do or say a certain thing shows that you felt justified at the time. Why argue or make an excuse?

Why don't you listen when you are called down? By so doing you might learn something to your advantage.

You can't arbitrarily force your ideas upon others.

What do you gain by becoming angry when any one tries to persuade you that you are wrong.

More than likely this is your method with the home folk.

You feel insulted and hurt that your methods are questioned, hence you do not even hear criticisms intended for your benefit.

You only show what a shallow, small and narrow person you are.

Really big characters don't have to make excuses under fire. Furthermore, they are willing to listen to anything that would give a new or broader viewpoint of the situation.
